North Central Accepts Accreditation Self-Study

Visitation Team Authorized for Campus

by Mary Lou Davidson

The ORU Report of Self Study has been accepted by the NCA college accreditation committee, thus moving the university one step closer to full accreditation, according to Dr. William Bowden, Director of Institutional Research. An evaluation team has been authorized by the North Central Association to visit the campus between November 1 and January 31—after which ORU's current Candidacy Status may be replaced by Accredited Status.

Concerning the coming visitation, Dr. Bowden remarked, "Prospects are most encouraging for a positive response to our institution and its programs, in which case the institution could be fully accredited as early as spring, 1971."

Seven faculty committees, coordinated by Dr. Carl Hamilton, compiled the Report of Self Study during the 1969-70 academic year. The purpose of the study was to explore the structure and function of ORU in each of the following areas: the philosophy of the institution; the resources of the institution (faculty resources, physical plant resources, library resources); the organization of the institution; the programs of instruction; policies and faculty morale; student life; and student achievement. In the latter two areas, students joined the faculty committees to assist in the evaluation.

The self-study was submitted to the North Central Association May 1, 1970, in anticipation of one of three possible responses: 1) complete rejection, 2) acceptance with recommendations and without authorization of a visiting team, or 3) acceptance as a quality self study and authorization of visitation by an evaluation team, a positive response towards full accreditation. The ORU study was accepted as a quality self study in July.

The introduction to the self-study reads: "From the first public discussion of the founding of the institution in 1962, the value and importance of a quality liberal arts program, accredited by the North Central Association have been recognized . . ." and Dr. Bowden adds that to the fullest extent of our resources ORU as an institution has implemented the recommendations made by two excellent consultants and two teams sent in the past by the NCA to our campus.

Dr. Bowden feels that "the self study recently prepared and submitted was one of the most significant staff-student projects in terms of involvement that has been undertaken to date as a community. It brought about a greater understanding of our goals and an understanding of their practical implementation."

"A very important development on our campus has been the realization of the place of the academic thrust in the total mission of the university. A community of faith and a community of learning existing on the same 500-acre piece of land has been called an incompatible set of goals, but as one ORU student said concerning his off-campus outreach work, "we're beginning to feel very deeply that education is more than books and tests . . . life is made up of bringing to our knowledge to bear on the solution of the problems of persons." This is the kind of synthesis that is central to the mission of our campus.

"Although much remains to be done in all areas as the institution moves toward a fuller realization of its high goals, we believe sincerely that, to the limit of our resources and comprehension, the institution is meeting the criteria for accredited standing with the Association, and the self study was submitted with that confidence."

major fall production

Wilder's 'Our Town' Staged Oct. 8-10

by Gerrie Henderson

Hailed by critics as an original and extremely interesting play "Our Town" by Thornton Wilder is scheduled for performance in just one week, October 8-10 at 8 p.m. in the Timko-Barton Lobby. The play, directed by drama professor Raymond Lewandowski, will be staged arena style, an interesting method of presentation for both audience and actor alike. The play "reaches into the past of America and evokes movingly a way of life which is lost in our present turmoil." (New York Sun).

Playing lead roles are Chuck Jones as the Stage Manager, Judy Ridenaur as the romantic heroine Emily Webb, and George Elswick, as Emily's leading man George Gibbs. Hal Warfield and Alma Golder will play Dr. and Mrs. Gibbs; Joyce Vogt and Tom Martino play their neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Webb. The plot action centers around these two families, whose other members include Pepi Ford and Robert Lewandowski.

It is hoped that the audience will be open-minded and perceptive when in attendance, for the play has a deep message to convey. Several times cast members mentioned that they have learned from the play how important are even the smallest incidentals of everyday life, and how these things can stifle true joy and happiness. Generally the play has been a learning experience of varying degrees. This is the first dramatic experience for some, so all is new and exciting and at times frightening; for the "old hands" it means the perfecting of their art and their conveyance of a message. As Alma Golder so aptly put it, "This play has changed my life." It is her feeling too that no one can come into any contact with this play without being changed. Another critic of the play said that it reaches not only to your heart but often deep inside it.

The first act outlines the history of the town-Grover's Corners, New Hampshire, and introduces the characters of the citizens. This is narrowed down to neighbors of the town and we are carried through a complete day of their lives. The second act has the love affair of two of the neighbors, and their marriage. The last act takes place in a cemetery. It is here that the deepest meanings of the play are made known and once surmises at last that truth is to be found only in the future.

Theatre-in-the-round will bring the audience as close as touching the cast at times. This naturally makes the make-up job a very difficult and exacting one; the head of the make-up crew is David Smith. The cast is large and the enormous job of costuming goes to Janet Beck and her crew. Props and scenery are the responsibility of Lydia Mathre and three others. Other crew chiefs include sound: Rachel Woodward and Lana Scott; lighting: Jerry Dixon and crew; publicity: Jan Dargatz; house manager: Pepi Ford. Altogether the backstage machinery is composed of at least twenty-one people.

This should prove to be "an exciting theatrical experience, moving in its drama, expressive in its philosophy, and fascinating in its technique."

Frosh Elect Officers

Results Announced Tonight

Larry Scott, Student Body Vice President, will reveal the results of the freshman elections tonight in the cafeteria, as the climax to a week of speeches and run-off elections. Voting polls closed at 4 p.m. today.

Often repeating the themes of their primary speeches, presidential candidates Paul Reason and Ralph Bard campaigned throughout the week. Run-off candidates for the other offices were vice-president: Dan Dillon and Ron Neuschwander; treasurer: Charles Weldon and Pete Berner, and secretary: Diane Steere and Pauly Yotter.

Reason stressed unity in his presidential campaign. "In order to accomplish anything as a class, we must be united. As president, I want to unify this class."

Bard centered his campaign on the importance of the Holy Spirit. "Our class is nothing without the Holy Spirit. If we are to grow together, it must be this Spirit that brings us together. The freshmen must learn to contribute to the school, and with the help of the Holy Spirit, this freshman class will become the building part of ORU."

The newly elected officers will provide the leadership necessary for the unification of the class. Also, as Student Senate members they will become involved in all matters concerning the university.

New Faculty: Personalities Explored

NOTE: Last week, THE ORACLE began an introductory review of the eleven members new to ORU faculty ranks. THE ORACLE this week focuses on the following personalities: Dr. Larry Walker and Mrs. Sherry Corbett in the psychology department; Mr. Richard Roller and Mr. Henry Migliore in the business department; and Dr. Francis Hendrickson, professor in education.

Mrs. Sherry Corbett is a 1969 ORU graduate and will receive her master's degree in sociology from Tulsa University in November. Her future plans include doctoral work at OSU. While at ORU, Mrs. Corbett served as the first editor of The Oracle. Mrs. Corbett now teaches eight sections of "Individual in Society," a general psychology course, and "Introduction to Anthropology." Outside interests include films and motorcycles, also interests of her husband, Mike, a former telecom student at ORU.

Dr. and Mrs. Larry Walker and their infant daughter have come to Tulsa from Starkville, Mississippi, where he completed his doctoral work at Mississippi State University. Having served five years as a graduate teaching assistant and one year as a graduate research assistant, Dr. Walker will be teaching for the first time on a full-time basis. He did undergraduate work in Missouri at Drury University and master's work in educational psychology at Memphis State. The subject of Dr. Walker's dissertation: "The Effect of Reactive Inhibition (fatigue) and Personality Variables on Standardized Test Scores."

Mr. Henry Migliore comes to ORU from Chicago, where he has worked for seven and a half years with the Continental Can Co. His work at ORU is his first full-time teaching position and he finds the involvement on a personal level exciting. Originally an Oklahoman, he began undergraduate work at Eastern State College in Wilberton, Oklahoma on a football and basketball scholarship. He finished his bachelor's degree at OSU and earned a Master of Science and Commerce degree from the University of St. Louis. Migliore teaches "Industrial Management," "Business Law," and "Financial Management." He has served as a management consultant with a Princeton, New Jersey firm and plans to continue to do so. Mrs. Migliore is a part-time ORU student; she and her husband have two children.

Mr. Richard Roller, who describes himself as "not much of a talker," also comes to teaching from the business world. He has worked as a financial analyst for Cities Service Oil Co. (in the areas of contracting and leasing locations), and for several years with army engineers. He received his M.A. from OSU and plans to continue his education there. Roller and his family came to ORU because of a desire to have greater personal contacts for ministry. At ORU he teaches "Accounting," "Marketing," and "Money and Banking." His philosophy concerning vocations: "Don't ever work just for money. You have to enjoy what you're doing."

New to the education department is Dr. Francis Hendrickson, a recently returned educational missionary from the Democratic Republic of the Congo, where he was director of a co-educational secondary boarding school for Congolese nationals. He earned his M.A. and doctorate at Columbia University, the latter in Educational Administration. His undergraduate work was done at Montclair State Teachers College (now Montclair University) under Dr. John D. Mesnick, founding dean of academic affairs of ORU and the architect of our educational program. Dr. Hendrickson teaches "Guidance and Counseling," "Developmental Psychology," and "Social Studies in the Elementary School." He and Mrs. Hendrickson, who is a part-time ORU student, have two sons and a daughter. They come to Tulsa from the University of Wisconsin, where they have been working since their return to the United States last year.

The film tells of an encounter between "The Cross and the Switchblade"—symbols apparently in diametric opposition. Based upon the novel of the same title by David Wilkerson, the story begins with an expansion from the producer: "this story is factual, though it may be hard to believe." . . . It is—hard to believe. The audience may very well be just as bewildered and shocked by the depravity of New York slum life as was the "skinny preacher" David Wilkerson, admirably played by Pat Boone.

The characters of the novel are all there: bigger than real life and just as colorful. The Mau Maus. The Bishops. Nicky Cruz. Nicky's girl Rosa. Bible-thumping Wilkerson. Skeptical law enforcement personnel and sociologists. The situations are all there too: front-page defense of addicts by Wilkerson, heroin withdrawal, gang fights, street ministry, and the birth of a curious new organization, "Teen Challenge." Above all, the encounter between Christianity and reality is drawn.

No movie can ever adequately show the miracle of conversion and the infilling of Christian love, but "The Cross and the Switchblade" comes close. Erik Estrada and Jackie Gireaux turn in fine performances as Nicky Cruz and Rosa. Somewhat lacking are the "dynamics" of the novel, and of Dave Wilkerson in real life. This soft-peddling may be compensated for when one realizes that the movie is geared to the secular audience—a welcome change from most Christian-oriented film programs.

Most importantly: "The Cross and the Switchblade" deals with the matters of awareness, compassion, and personal witness on the part of each Christian. This is not only a movie to be enjoyed, but a movie by which one may be truly challenged.

"The Cross and the Switchblade" was privately premiered for church officials and pressmen Monday at 10 a.m. in the Delman Theatre. Present at the showing was Jackie Gireaux, who responded to an interview with Reverend Bill Sanders by calling Wilkerson "a ball of fire" in real life, and classifying Pat Boone's religion as a "beautiful thing." Concerning her own religious views: "I always ask for God's help—not just in acting but in my whole life. Faith gives security."

The film will open to the Tulsa public November 11 at Southroads Cinema.

Chorale elects officers

The newly-formed 97-voice ORU Collegiate Chorale has elected the following officers for the 1970-71 term: president, Vernon Bettis; vice-president, Bruce Wilkin; secretary, Lynn Gentis; head music librarian, Barbie Nickerson. Also Laura Schmidt and Veb Lemmons as wardrobe heads, and Ron Neuenschwander as head of properties.

The choir will appear twice with the Tulsa Philharmonic this year, in February and again in March. In addition, several major concerts are scheduled for the ORU student body, including reserve-seat Christmas concerts—December 11-12.

North side elementary welcomes ORU tutors

"I'll bet I know where you're from. You're from Oral Roberts' School." These words, plus glowing smiles and twinkling eyes from the children at Dunbar Elementary School, made ORU students feel truly welcome as they began their volunteer "tutoring" at the school last week.

Dunbar, primarily a Negro school, has initiated a new program this year whereby pupils are placed in each class according to their achievement scores. A lack of sufficient staff members at the school creates the need for "teachers' aides." ORU students have volunteered to fill these positions.

Many of the Dunbar teachers have their classes split into slow, moderate, and quick-learner levels. While the teacher works with one group, the ORU tutor is put in charge of the remaining students. This gives the quicker pupils a chance to work alone at their own speed, and also provides extra help for those who need special attention. In essence, the ORU students are two extra hands for each Dunbar teacher.

Now that the program is underway, many of the teachers are planning new projects for the tutors. Some students will have a greater chance to participate in class instruction—giving the pupils more variety and the teacher more time to prepare lessons and give individual attention. To the tutors, Dunbar is a learning experience as much as a teaching opportunity; psychology and sociology are brought to the practical level.

The Middle East. Who can understand the crises there?

With this question before them, members of an ORU study team journeyed to Israel for a summer of searching the past and watching the present. Included in the group were Dr. and Mrs. Roy Hayden and their daughter, Helen, Dr. Howard Ervin, Gretchen Ervin, Mrs. Rine, Sally Abel, Annamae Burroughs, Sarah Martin, David Mills, and Carol Norton.

The first five days of the tour were spent in Northern Israel; Jerusalem served as home base for the group for the remainder of their stay. From Jerusalem, expeditions to both northern and southern areas were taken in connection with classes.

The courses of study included Archeology, Historical Geography and Modern Israel. As a part of the archeology course, the students participated in the diggings of newly discovered ruins in the older part of Jerusalem.

CLC recruits guests artists

Two guest performers have been secured, and numerous others contacted for the upcoming Concert and Lecture Series, according to Emil Trautman, concert-lecture committee chairman. Mr. Leslie French, English actor and director, will conduct a two-day Shakespearean workshop, lecturing October 22 and performing play highlights October 23. Secured for a March performance is Mr. Gerald Goodman, troubador harpist and folk singer.

Those being contacted by the committee or the Oral Roberts Association include Senator Mark Hatfield, Paul Harvey, Dr. Arrow Smith ("The Return of the Humanities"), sporano-artist Sylvia Kutchikian (Houghton College), Dr. Sidney Cohen ("The LSD Story"), master of electronic music Vladimir Ussachevski (Columbia University), and John McCandish Phillips, New York Times staff member.

At least one concert and one lecture per month are being projected by the committee as well as two lectures per semester by members of the ORU faculty. Faculty lectures will be presented on Sunday afternoons as a Town Hall Forum, allowing for question-and-answer periods. An "Activities Dateline"—including all cultural performances and lectures in the Tulsa area—is also being compiled regularly by committee members and will be posted periodically on both dorm and LRC bulletin boards.

Contained in this site is a wall dating from the reign of King Uziah, 700 B.C.

The students were impressed by many different aspects of Israeli life and culture but as might be expected, the main impressions were made by the Israeli people themselves. Sarah Martin commented that "they were a very reserved people . . . at times hard to reach. In many respects, the youth is much like American youth—using drugs, holding different ideals from the older generation, interested in their own style of music." David Mills noted especially, however, that there exists "a real respect between the youth and the older people."

The group also found the Israelis very nationally minded; both men and women serve in the armed forces and remain in the reserves until they are 35. David added: "Many of them even want to volunteer for Viet Nam."

The team felt that because of the Israel trip, they could better appreciate Bible happenings, and understand more fully the feelings of Christ. Annamae Burroughs remarked that she now understands why Christ had such a compassion for people, as their needs were such visible ones. Carol Norton, after visiting the Vad Vashen (a shrine to the six million Jews who lost their lives in World War II) commented that the 14 stations of the Cross brought an emotional response so strong that one felt as if he was suffering with Christ.

Dr. Hayden plans to offer the study program each summer. Two variations are foreseen: one tour similar to last summer's program, and a new program in Hebrew study designed for teachers.

Hayden, Ervin Give Opinions

After a summer of first-hand study and observation, Dr. Hayden and Dr. Ervin commented on the background of the Middle East conflict this way: "The situation is not going to get better until the Arabs realize that Israel is here to stay, and that they must agree to bargain. Actually, people misunderstand how the situation came about. They assume that for hundreds of years the Arabs owned the section in the Gaza strip taken by Jordan. However, Jordan and Egypt invaded that area in 1948, and what they held they took by invasion. To cries of "give it back," one must ask "to whom?" If you give Gaza back to the Arabs you simply validate their invasion, and declare the Israeli conquest invalid."

"Originally this territory was owned by Britain. When the British moved out, the United Nations set up two states: one for the Arabs and Jews, and another for only Arabs. When it was voted through, Egypt and Jordan both attacked and tried to do away with the Jews completely. Gaza was taken by Egypt and the West back by Jordan."

Dr. Ervin agrees with Syris Gordon's description that this war is a "clash of mentalities." It's impossible to deal with the Arab culture on a rational basis, for they are an emotional culture—2,000 years out of the 20th century."

try communicating

There is no doubt that the human race has advanced technologically far beyond the wildest dreams of our ancestors. However, in spite of the nations and cities we have built as monuments to ourselves, we have yet to reach a comparable plane in human relations. We have yet to learn about the "inner composition" of each other. As far as interpersonal relationships go, we seem primitive.

First of all, we must realize that communication means more than "hello" or "how are you." True communication is not a one-time goodwill gesture, but an attitude and way of life. All inter-human problems seem to stem from a lack of this type of communication: wars, disagreements, threatening ideologies. Even alienation from God is a communications problem: man refusing to communicate with his Creator.

Our excuses for not communicating are many:

activated women

We proceed on the premise that the ORU woman has been liberated. Obviously, though perhaps not via "demand."

Further assumptions: 1) there is no universal cry for a reversal of sex roles, 2) chauvinistic males are best ignored, not irritated, for in all actuality, there is no "superiority" in sex, just difference, 3) superior achievement is generally recognized regardless of sex, 4) most women possess the inherent—though perhaps latent—ingenuity and charm necessary to attain their personal whims without suspect, and 5) womanhood is a delightful privilege, not a burden. In conclusion, the Women's Lib movement is a form of shadow-boxing.

Our immediate concern: is the ORU woman "activated"? Politically, socially, academically, physically, spiritually?

The need for activated women is acutely obvious; the orphanage, church, hospital, classroom, ghetto, and detention home are all open territory. Political candidates, social assistance agencies, and minority organizations clamor for volunteer aides. On this campus, social events, clubs and student government need personnel.

Add ability and ambition (tempered by the compassion only women possess) for undeniable qualifications. Benefits, tangible and intangible. Structure within which to work: available in the form of clubs,

"How can I communicate? I am only a freshman, or I'm just one of the masses. What does my opinion count for?" "I'm trapped by my middle or upper class values. I want to 'get it together' with my fellow man but the barrier is too great." "I can't effectively communicate because I am a victim of social and cultural deprivation." In spite of all these counter-arguments, I dare say that communications is one instance in which no physical or psychological mountain can stop a determined will!

Try communicating on this campus. The first step for many may be "awareness of the needs around us"—a thinking through on problems and questions. (Idle words are a reflection of idle thoughts.) Start the communicating process wherever you are, and drop into life instead of "dropping out."

Titan Soccer-men Seek New Talent

by Colin Bent

The Oral Roberts Soccer team has a big job this season in trying to field a competent team for competition. Any team that loses six of its regular starters has a problem. Last year Arden Autry and Joel Vesanen played their final games, assisting the booters to a 10-2-2, win, loss, tie record. The other four lost are Dave Bates, Tim Tabor, Lowry Perry, and Mark Spuler.

For the 1970 season, Coach John Cassanova has now been made head coach and has a 9 game schedule prepared for his team. This is doubtlessly the toughest line-up of opponents any ORU squad has faced to date. Opposition includes St. Benedicts, Ottawa, and William Jewel, all from the Kansas-Missouri area.

Returning from last year's squad are Paul Ott, Don Green, Bill Tehanchuk, Greg Springs, Gary Van de Kieft, Lonnie McCarthy, Mitch DeZeuw, Bob Eames, and Colin Bent. Don Green was found to be the stronghold of the defense last season, and should turn in a splendid performance for his last year. Greg Springs gave account for himself as custodian and should have a pretty good season between the sticks again. Backing Springs up this fall is Nolan Grubb, a young goal-keep with great potential, who should take over for Springs next year.

Coming in as a freshman is Doug Tehanchuk, brother of Bill. Doug is an all-star from New Jersey, and is a very strong and fast player. Too much cannot be said about this young defenseman, and in this writer's estimation, he has the ability to go a long way in the game. Also playing in their first season are forwards Alieu Fye, and Ike Forh.

Soccer, which is the number one spectator sport in the world, is relatively new to the United States. However, it is rapidly breaking into its own among the colleges in the north, and in the high schools along the east coast, and undoubtedly captivates the the spectator. The Titan booters opened their season last Saturday against Rockhurst College of Kansas City; The Titans were defeated 6 goals to 1. In this opener spectatorship was fair, but still the game was not as well attended as should have been the case. The next home game will be against Evangel on October 10th at 2:00 p.m.

Goalie Greg Springs pulls down potential point as defenseman Don Greene and Hawks opponent charge cage in Sept. 26 debut.

Doug Tehanchuk, ORU defensive rookie, scrambles for ball control under heavy pressure by Hawks forward.

Calmus Joins Diamond Staff; Trades Dodger Cap for ORU

Richard Calmus has recently joined the ORU coaching staff as assistant baseball coach under head coach Herb Dallis. Calmus graduated from Tulsa Webster High School where he played baseball and basketball and received top honors in both.

Upon graduation from high school, he joined professional baseball in the Dodger organization and played with the 1963 World Champion Los Angeles Dodgers. Calmus' most memorable moment was winning his first game after a no-hitter pitched by Sandy Koufax.

Later, Coach Calmus was traded to the Chicago Cubs where he played for three years and then was sold to the Kansas City Royals. It was then he decided to retire and join the ORU staff. Calmus is currently enrolled at ORU as a student majoring in physical education, and minoring in art. This year, he hopes to help develop the fine potential of the baseball team into the statistics of a successful season.
