Dramatists stage 'Shrew'
Shakespearian play to run March 18-20

As for our play, it is a kind of history, a kind of story of a man's way with a maid, and a maid's way with a man, but in her own way doth the story lie.

—Prologue

This will be the fourth of our ORU Drama Department stages the classic Shakespearean comedy, "Taming of the Shrew" March 18-20 in the Timko-Barton Auditorium under the direction of Drama Professor Raymond Lewandowski.

Sandi Martin and David Smith will portray the leading characters of Kate and Petruchio in this farcical subjugation of a beautiful but intolerable marriage-devising shrew by a madcap knave. From their first explosive meeting, Petruchio subjects Kate to a series of verbal and physical indignities under the pretense of kindness. In contrast to this direct clash is the elaborate wooing of Kate's demure sister, Bianca (Janet Fahnsted) by the disguised Lucentio and Hortensio (Charles Kennedy and David Fry).

Other major roles will be played by Chuck Jones (Gru- nio), Herb Sisson (Gremish), Stephen Hall (Tranio), Completing the cast are Hal Wur- field, George Elswick, Alex Cor- bin, Robert Perry, Eugene Lynn. Also Cindy Johnson, Alina Gold- er, Sharon Hurley, Terri Looney, Bev Schmidgall, Judy Wuie, and Pepi Ford.

Ticket sales open
Free student and faculty tick- et may be obtained in the SAC

Fireside Room or reserved by calling ext. 2023 between 8:00-4:30 Monday through Friday. Faculty members will be allowed only one pair of tickets per family. Ticket sales, which are open exclusively to ORU students and faculty March 10-12, will open to the public Monday, March 15.

A side-splitting evening
In reflecting on the play's selec- tion, Lewandowski commented: "The Taming of the Shrew" is one of Shakespeare's funniest comedies and I feel that we are overdue in presenting a play that will allow our audience to sit back and laugh. At the same time, Shakespeare's plays are always full of depth and meaning. They provide any producing group with a definite challenge.

"We are doing the play in a broad farcical style so there will be plenty of action and fun from start to finish," the director promised. "The audience will de- finitely find this a side-splitting evening at the theatre, with the dowdily woman and strong woman-tamer the chief objects of fun."

Crews assist directors
Beverly Sperling, junior drama major, will assist Lewandowski as the student associate director. Backstage, Linda Bird, Joyce Vogt, and Sue Ann Spencer will be working with make-up; Janet Beck, Bob Burchett, and Joni Hall will handle costumes; Tracy Hartman, Betty Baxter, and Cindy Johnson will manage costumes. Part Simpson has assumed the duties of House Manager for the production. Billy Long, Pepi Ford, and Denise Woodman will be responsible for properties. Sue Zoolittle has assumed the task of costumes-designing and sewing — personally responsible for nearly 30 separate changes — as part of a drama class assign- ment.

A special postrun performance will be given for the dele- gates to the American Associa- tion of Evangelical Students Con- gress March 26.

Senators Hatfield to address students
Republican Senator Mark Hat- field is by no means an un- known to the American college campus. Highly demanded as an orator, the well-qualified senator will speak before the entire stu- dent body at next Thursday's re- quired chapel March 18.

Recipient of thirteen honorary degrees and twenty honorary doctorates, Senator Hatfield has received such awards as the Eleanor Roosevelt Humanitarian Award, Order of Lafayette's Freedom Award for Dista- guished Leadership in Combat- ing Communism, and the Robert A. Taft Memorial Award.

Election to the Oregon House of Representatives, Secretary of State, and Oregon Senate are among his political achievements. Presently he is serving on the Senate Committee of Aeronauti- cal and Space Sciences, Com- mittee on Interior and Insular Affairs, and the Select Commit- tee on Small Business and many subcommittees.

Hatfield has served as resident assistant at Stanford University, as well as instructor, associate professor of political science, and dean of students at Willamette University.

Married to former Antoinette Kunnanich, he is the father of four children: Elizabeth, Mark Jr., Theresa, and Charles Vin- cenc.

Because he is well known for his Christian influence and wit- ness in politics, the Oral Roberts Association has various connec- tions with the senator. Through primarily their efforts, he has appeared on a national "Com- pact" special and will also visit ORU next week.

AAES delegates are coming...
Summer School

Jernigan seeks course suggestions

Requests, wishes, suggestions and ordinary ideas are currently being accepted by William W. Jernigan, director of extended sessions, in planning for Summer School 1971. Comments Jernigan: "I anticipate having the Summer Session next June. April 15, but first want comments from students as to what they desire in the way of course offerings.'

The Summer Session, set for June 7 through July 17, will be the second in ORU's history. Last year's debut saw a total enrollment of 176. Pre-enrollments will begin May 3 and all course listings should be firm by mid-April.

Concerning suggestions for course offerings, Jernigan says: "I'd like to offer electives and other special interests alongside the required courses usually listed. Some of the courses can even be allowed to operate below the minimum of 15 enrollees, provided other courses balance them out by exceeding." Travel programs may be a part of the offerings, depending upon student interest. Education workshops—in reading and kindergarten—will run from June 14-22.

"We are considering offering off-campus prospectus ready broad studies, languages and other areas," Jernigan notes. "Naturally, students should consult their advisors before making final choices for Summer Session."

TROUBADOR HARPST Gerald Goodman will present a lecture and concert (2:30 and 7:30) in Zoppel Auditorium Wednesday, March 17 under the sponsorship of the Senate Concert and Lecture Series Committee. Admission will be free. Goodman is the only entertainer who sings and accompanies himself on the harp and has traveled widely throughout the USA and Canada as both a soloist and accompanist.

Chamber Singers plan third concert March 13

The Oral Roberts University Chamber Singers will present their third major concert of the 1971-72 season Saturday, Mar. 13, 8 p.m. in the Timko-Barton Hall.

Directed by Raffaele Catanzariti, The Chamber Singers are a highly-select 16-member group specializing in music from the Renaissance and Baroque periods in addition to Broadway showtunes, Negro spirituals, and popular settings.

The concert will offer different groups of nationalist music, exhibiting a variety of styles with a certain period or school of composers. Most of the program's 20 numbers can be cited as madrigals. By their very nature most madrigals are quite short; many last between 1 and 2 minutes. The first group will feature numbers by Thomas Morley, John Dowland, and the contemporary American composer Jena Berger.

The second set of songs will feature two Latin numbers by Jo- cervus Gallius and Giovani Nuni-ni, a number in Italian by Jakob Arndt, and a rollicking Neapolitan madrigal by Baldassare Donato.

The third group will feature music from the 16th-century German composers Hans Leo Ha ender and Erasmus Widman, plus a joyous rooted from the early Romantic period by Franz Schubert.

Three short French chansons will be sung by the Chorale. No. 2 Jeanpageau, and Claude de Sermis and a French-Cajun folk song with Vaughn Story as soloist will make up the fourth group.

Last year's concert (Blues Colonials) consisted of lighter popular music, with Ne- gro spirituals and music in the rock-gospel style.

The program will last approximately one hour and is free of charge. There will be no reserved seats.

Figlet's Finds...

a column of real-life humor

Music history kids have it rough. They listen to 6 hours of recordings, and when test time comes, have to identify movement, composer, and title of whatever the needle is placed on the record. Sophomore Lowell Burch told a friend he has a sure-fire way of identifying Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 to F Major. Movement 1: sounds like water on a hot skillet. No. 2 sounds like a wounded moose in an echo chamber. No. 3 sounds like a pirate talking to a gorilla running through a valley. Worse yet, he helped himself!

That was a compliment! One ORU boy told an ORU girl: 'You're not beautiful like some girls. And not ugly like others.' Wondering where she really stood, she asked, 'Where am I?' His answer? 'Somewhere in-between.'

Everybody knows Jo Frauler. Or do they? Jo was making a long distance call to the Tulsa operator and said, "This is Jo Frauler ... oh, that's right, you don't care who I am, do you?"

Mary Bacon remarked after getting a drink at an ORU fountain, "Old facelift!"

Did you hear about the boy who wrote furiously for 20 minutes on his first immunology test, and then wondered why he didn't really understand the questions? Mr. Sexton helped him out, by telling him he was in second year, and should go start the first year test over in Zoppel where he belonged.

In our house we have a little saying when a person needs to rest: "Why don't you take five?" This simply means to lie down for five minutes for a quick pick-up. So my roommate had a headache. I said, "Take an aspirin. Then take five." And she screamed I was trying to get rid of her! The very idea of taking 6 aspirin at once!

Criticism contagious; try logical approach

"Well, what more could you expect from a totally self-conned administration?"

Have you any remarks which vaguely resemble that? Change isn't the only constant thing about ORU. At one time it may have been, but now its constancy is rivaled by that of criticism.

Students rap in the dorms about their "total lack of rights," then confront the administration with their views. Right? Wrong. Instead of grappling (what an impression that must make), to friends back home—to everyone except those who have the influence to change the things the students consider unfair.

Any administrative decision is immediately labeled "automatic," a "docere from on high," or something corresponding—negative and unequivocal. This truly is a unique university if most of its students are obstinate. I cannot believe that our administrators are so far removed from us that consideration of student feelings does not influence their thinking. But I do believe that there are many more takers to consider than we often know about. If students would take time to look for facts, to visit Dean Voight or Dr. Hamilton or some other official, when they question a decision, they might discover an enlightening array of pressures and demands that the policy-makers must deal with in their capacity as leaders.

I am not pro-administration nor anti-administration but I am pro-logic. I've heard kids complaining that their individuality is being squelched, that the administration's disregard of students' personness is un-Christian. Personal worth is God-given. Can an external act change it? Rules are not always agreeable, to be sure, but we should be secure enough within ourselves and in the power of Christ to maintain the integrity of His creature to be able to contract to obey a given set of rules, and then mature enough to uphold our end of the contract without complaint.

If we really are Christian young people, as we purport to be, and at the same time disagree with our more conservative brothers' concept of what constitutes Christianity, we are all being rankled at our being "narrow-minded," or even worse, "un-Christian." I have read in the fourteenth chapter of Romans point that differences of implementation of standards are not to be the cause of division. Tolerance is to come from both sides, but more from the "liberated" side. We who call ourselves "strong" of the faith have the special responsibility of guarding the more structured faith of our less mature brothers.

Criticism is not always overt—a snear, a laugh, perhaps but only a grimace—so it is often contagious. We may all agree that there are many things around ORU that need correction, but we seem to forget that changes can only be accomplished by action. All too often, kids point out the faults and offer no better alternatives or ways to progress within the existing system. Since living in the world as it is can at times be tedious, it seems to me that we would promote greater happiness among those of the university community and the community at large if we spread joy (Rom. 14:19) rather than ministered questions (1 Tim. 1:4). Inevitably we influence ("no man liveth unto himself," Rom. 14:17), so by our attitudes, actions, and words we Christians should seize the opportunities presented us to influence positively.

The President's Corner

Peace can overwhelm

During March 25 through 28, ORU will experience yet another convention—but of a different caliber. Young people from many colleges and universities who belong to the American Association of Evangelical Schools will attend the annual national convention on our campus. Many of these students will not be in complete agreement with our purpose here; but there is one important thing that they will be scrutinizing most closely... and that is the depth and excitement of our commitment to our goals.

They will all have heard much about ORU, just as the seminar guests have; and from this concept, they will form opinions of the ideal—that which we say we believe in our literature—and the real—that which we actually feel and express through our conversation and life style.

I am asking that we re-evaluate our attitudes about ORU. Let's quit worrying about hair length, and dress codes and concentrate instead on the more important issues facing us. There are millions of people who crave the peace and spiritual understanding that we possess, and the only effective way I know to let others in on our secret is to share it with them.

I challenge you to think of guests of our university as very special people to whom I dare you to get close to them. The love that most seminar guests have for ORU may surprise you—just as the love we express to the delegates of the AAES Convention can overwhelm them.

—Charles Redd

COMMENTARY

No Christians, please!

I am writing this article as an invitation to those students who are reading this editorial and those who, like myself, are walking a tight rope not knowing if they are a Christian or not. Being in this situation myself I know the anxiety, the pain, and the guilt suffering you go through when you are uncertain of your faith/or just don't believe. I also know that in a community such as ORU, where everyone is expected or assumed to be a Christian it becomes very difficult to talk to anyone about your disbelief for fear of embarrassment or loss of friends. I know this as well as anyone else. I have come to this conclusion by my own doing. Many of you know me and can very easily see my faults and failures. I don't hide them very well; I am no phony! I am me.

I see my faults just as well as anyone and I know I need the love of Jesus. Right now I feel I am not alone in this and would like to extend a hand to others of you who feel as I do, no knowing Christ or if you are a Christian or not. Maybe together we can find Christ or He can find us.

All those who qualify (no Christians please) and are willing to seek peace, please contact me anytime (day or night) and any place. My phone number is 219-2381. You need not tell me who you are if you wish, I live in Apt. No. 107 the university Village Annex, or stop me if you see me at school. I can't guarantee we'll find Christ but I guarantee we'll try.

One in pain, Win. E. Stolberg
Cinderella sport needs redefining

by Colin Kerr

In almost any other country in the world, when the word "soccer" is mentioned, the thought of clanking helmets and running shoulder pads never even enters one's mind. Instead, one would be referring to the number-one spectator sport in the world, which is invariably referred to in the USA as "soccer." Unknown to most Americans, however, the game has been in this country for over 100 years. In 1862 it was banned from Harvard and Yale for being too rough.

Soccer undoubtedly attracts the largest audiences of any sport in the world. With the advent of television a tele-Cinderella story has been further enhanced.

Soccer, which calls for dexterity of feet as well as upperbody control, is one of the few games in the United States which enables a man of small stature to compete with and even outsprint the giants. But regardless of the spectacular event it is, soccer has so far been unable to draw crowds in the U.S. comparable to those in any other country. Still the game is on the up, as far as attendance goes, because no one can ever stay away from the soccer bug has bitten.

ORU has been on the soccer scene for some time now. It's name was seemingly lost to most people, and a step in the right direction when competition for the 1969-70 season was said to be on the varsity level. But after two seasons the game is yet to be recognized as anything but a Cinderella sport. Some students have even concocted that they never knew soccer was played here.

Given half a chance the ORU soccer program (undeveloped now) could become second to none. We have here a natural supply of personnel in intercollegiate students. This is fine. There is also on this campus a student willing to share his wealth of experience and knowledge, as yet to be used advantageously. I speak of one Miguel de Diego, a man of slight build but a giant on the turf.

Diego has been playing professional soccer since the age of eighteen. A native of Spain, he signed with Real Madrid, a top club in Europe, eight years ago. Playing for Madrid for five years, he was chosen player of the year before deciding to make the United States his home. Since his arrival here in October of 1968 he has played for the league-championship of Greek-Americans in Washington D.C. and led the league in assists. From there he played one season for the Washington D.C. champs of the American Soccer League and was again his league's leader in assists. Miguel possessed the strongest left foot shot on the team and was titled the "fastest of all the Darts." On coming to Oklahoma, he signed with the Kansas City Stars for whom he played last summer.

Obviously, Miguel could not be used in a player capacity because of his professional status, but why hasn't he been used as a coach? a position to which he would not be a stranger. While playing for the Darts in Washington, he served as a member of the coaching staff for George-town University. Last season, he was coach to Cascia Hall High School in Tulsa and his boys posted a 7-2 record, the two defeats coming at the hands of the ORU squad.

Being such a soccer enthusiast, Miguel is anxious waiting in the annex to be called into service. He thinks there are talented players at ORU who with "the right approach and training," could build the nucleus of a soccer dynasty. But whatever is to be done should be done with as little delay as possible. Men who have performed for ORU at a club level are becoming frustrated with the stagnation of the soccer "program" and other able players are seeking to render their services elsewhere.

Soccer is "on the up." The game, which is one of the least expensive organized sports to finance, is still in the nucleus stage at ORU and should not be allowed to die there. And the valuable storehouse of knowledge in Miguel de Diego should not be left for the benefit of others.

Titan linksters sweep tri-meet opener

by Ken Holmgen

The Oral Roberts University golf team became the second school team to defeat a Tulsa University team, as it did Oral Roberts Tulsa 15-4 in a triangular meet at LaFerrante Country Club Thursday, March 1. The ORU linksters also defeated Iowa State University, 13-6, to sweep the three-team event.

"We're real proud to have beaten TU," Coach Myron Peace declared with a smile, "because TU has been the top team in the eastern half of the state. Iowa State also has a good team in one of the better teams in the Big 8 conference, outside of Oklahoma State University, which is consistently the Big 8 golf champion."

The number one-two-three in the ORU win was exerted by senior Ted Gellert, 1-2 from Canada, and freshman Dave Barr, a talented young golfer also from Canada. Other ORU players asserting their top six positions, are Jim Fowler, a freshman from Ohio and an ex-service-man, Ted O'Shields, a sophomore transfer from Tulsa, and Harold Fisher, a sophomore from Tulsa. Mike Welch, a frosh golfer from Muncie, and Gary Lee, a sophomore from Tulsa, both played in the sixth position for ORU in the March 1 tourney against Tulsa University and Iowa State respectively.

"But we will really keep us as this season is the balance of our 11-man squad," Coach Peace asserted, listing four more team members in sophomore Gary Ser-weight, Frank Billingslea, sophomore from Tulsa, Paul Smith, freshman at Florida, and freshman Stan Beckman from Ohio.

"We have a young team," the golf mentor commented, "but every man on this squad has had tournament experience and a good handling from where he has come. We are dedicated first of all to a winning season for the Lord, and our boys have decided to work hard and get good results. Not only does golf demand long hitters and linksters who, in most cases, will never make the top ten, but practice hours and real dedication.

"And that's what the ORU linksters have been busy doing this week in preparation for the Oklahoma State University Cow- boy Invitational today and tomorrow at Stillwater."

"We aspire to finish among the top five or six in a field of 15 or 20 teams invited," Peace said. Some teams participating in the most include Kansas University, Kansas State, Oklahoma State, ORU, Tulsa University, Central State College, and North Texas State. This is the first year ORU has been invited to the OSU Invitational.

Peace is in his second year of coaching golf at ORU, after guiding his 1969-70 team to a No. 1 ranking in the nation. He is not considering who we played—teams such as TU and Central State," he added.

Those same teams will be providing some of the competition at the OSU tourney this week-end and should give good indication of the Titans' progress in their aspirations for a well-developed golf program.

Baseballers win 3 of 4 vs. Kansas

The Oral Roberts University baseball team began in season with three winning games here last weekend while losing one to a powerful Kansas University team.

In the first doubleheader last Friday, the Titans let loose for 25 hits in 2 games as they won 5-2 and 9-1. The 5-2 win was pitched by Sophomore Jimmy Lee who finished the day with five hits in eight trips to the plate. A three-run third inning, which included a two-run triple by Gary Maples, was the key to the series opener win.

Clinching the victory in the Friday nightcap was a three-run first inning and the three-hit pitching of Sophomore Right- hander Steve Cain.

On Saturday, however, the Ti- tans were forced to settle for a split of their twin bill, as sophomore Jack Chesney pitched a 5-hit ball in a 3-1 win. Kansas exploited their seventh inning to outrace ORU, 11-7.

The final game of the series, however, saw KU send three runs home in the fifth inning and four more in the sixth for the win, 16-4, as they took advantage of pitching by Freshman Pitcher Stan Kerby and Dave Roof. Making his ORU debut in the game was freshman right- hander Larry Tolbert.

Commenting on his team's wins against the KU team, which went 2-0 with its three pitchers and four of its top five hitters from last year's second place Big 8, Coach Robert Herd Dailly said, "After seeing our boys in action, I think we are going to have a pretty fair team. The start should be up to our confidence." The Titans will host William Jewell College at Northside Park on North Lewis Avenue in a doubleheader to begin here tomorrow at 1 p.m. Three more games are scheduled for this week, including a trip to Tahlequah to face Central State College next Monday. Two home events are scheduled, both against East Central State College, and the last game will be at Oklahoma City University. All games begin at 1 p.m.
