Roberts unveils projects
Park, chapel, education complex to be developed

With the Special Events Center now 25 percent completed, three more major building projects were unveiled in chapel on March 17, President Roberts, Vice-President Eskridge, Architect Frank Wallace, and Chaplain Stamps spent the hour describing:

University Park, an office complex to be developed over the next 15-20 years on the land south of 81st Street and east of Lewis Avenue.

a chapel, square in shape, extending from the west tip of the Reece Memorial Gardens at 45-degree angles to Lewis Ave.

an adult education complex with auditorium, food service, and housing to be located on the mall between Braxton and Shakkarian Halls.

"University Park will be owned by the ORU Endowment Fund," explained Roberts, "to generate income and help us hold down student fees in the years to come." Vice-President Eskridge named no specific firms involved, but expected buildings in the park to be occupied by financial institutions, educational services, research corporations, laboratories—enterprises of this type—and surmised that some of these would offer jobs for ORU students.

The Oral Roberts Association building is already within the boundaries of the office park, and others to be built, once a zoning change is effected, will be similar to it. "The land will never be sold," Roberts clarified, "but only leased in order to benefit the Endowment Fund."

Preparatory sketches of the chapel and Pentecost's facility showed a low profile, with the existing Prayer Tower as a spire of sorts. Flying roof support beams will touch the ground outside the sidewalks. Full capacity will be 3,000, with smaller configurations for 2,000 and 1,000.

The chapel will be supported with hydraulic lifts, enabling the formation of tiers or risers for choirs. The projected cost of the chapel is currently between $1.5 and 1.7 million.

Roberts repeatedly welcomed student suggestions as detailed planning proceeds. He promised that student committees would be formed to advise. "I hope," he said with a smile, "to have the chapel ready during the fall of 1972."

The sketch of the adult education complex, which will be used primarily for seminars attended by Partners of the Oral Roberts ministry, consists of three elements: residence halls close to Braxton and Shakkarian, and an auditorium and dining commons between them. The total cost is estimated at approximately $1.4 million; the Partners' facility sketch is one of several being discussed, and must be considered the most embryonic of the three projects.

German students plan study tour

Professor Heit initiates Tueningen University credit exchange

by Ken Holmgren

Three Oral Roberts University students will be leaving this summer for the Eberhard-Karls University in Tuebingen, Germany, where they will be studying for either 6/semester or a year.

"I'm really looking forward to returning to Germany," said Dave Connor, a junior German major who has studied in Vienna, Austria, for 2 months and visited Germany while in Europe. Besides Dave, who will be studying a year at the Tuebingen university, two other ORU student seniors, Carol Shoemaker and Theresa Piatt, have made definite plans to go for a semester's study next fall.

Initiator of the German study program abroad is Sigfried E. Heit, German instructor here since last fall. This plan is similar to one used by several of the larger American universities. The University of Wisconsin sponsors 50-60 students studying in Germany under a similar program.

"The maximum of 12 credits may be earned in one semester at the German University under the supervision of an ORU advisor while a year of academic work is worth 25 credits.

What are the objectives of the study abroad program? There is no better way to learn the German language than to learn it in Germany," Heit said. "In addition to gaining a greater command of the language, the students will also be introduced to the cultural, economic, political, religious, and social conditions of Germany." Heit went on to explain that students intending to study in Germany must have junior standing and will be forced to have a command of the German language, noting that they will be required to pass a German Language Proficiency Exam before entering there.

"Prior to the beginning of the semester, the advisory office for foreign students at the university, the Akademisch Auslandsamt, will offer an intensive 3-week 8-hour-a-day German language course at Tuebingen. Thus it is recommended that the student arrive in Tuebingen 4 or 5 days before the opening of the academic semester to develop a required proficiency and of course, to be able to study where instruction is in the German." Heit said. The student must fail to pass the language proficiency test, the 3-week course he said, "will be able to take intermediate and advanced language courses during the semester which will also be for credit at ORU," Heit noted.

While studying in Germany, the ORU students will be working toward certificates of achievement (Schiene) instead of grades and upon returning they will submit written reports summarizing lecture and seminar notes, and undergo an oral examination.

Course work in other areas than German may be taken at the Eberhard-Karls University with the clearance of the respective head of the department concerned. A student with a major or minor in German may take a course to meet other requirements with permissions from the ORU departments involved. Approximate cost for one semester of study at the Tuebingen university, which is located in a city of 50,000 inhabitants in Ulmshapen made by ORU students in Germany, is 575, including transportation to and from Europe.

Not ignoring racial problems, Professor Hatfield commented, "I think it would be impossible to set a value of black. Overt words are strictly forbidden. The Boston Recorder, the Missionary Herald, and Washington's Farewell Address are recommended.

"People have grown weary of the scientific, rationalistic view of man. There is a general rejection of those values which have built a materialistic society. This is our opportunity to present a pragmatic, practical, empirical experience with Jesus Christ." Hatfield concludes his essay with the words, "The best time to show them that 150 years from now there is a place to prove your love here is.

The senator discussed these policies and others at a faculty labor lunch at 12 noon the same day. He also had almost 250 concerned students during an informal press conference at 2 p.m.

Back to the beginning

During this season of resurrection and reflection, it may be pertinent for many of us to resurrect and reexamine a relatively important document in our college lives—the "Statement of Why I (the prospective student) Wish to Attend ORU." In 300-500 words, most of us expressed a desire for a fine liberal arts education in a Christian context and environment. We vowed to do our best to make it so. And many of us saw ORU as a time for finding ourselves, for developing personal philosophies of life, for attempting to derive solutions for world problems, for growing in spiritual and moral commitment.

Remember? What about now?

Are we living and acting according to our original goals and values? Are we striving towards these higher purposes? Or have we become more concerned in expression of ideas than in formulation of ideas?

At times it seems that we are more militant in our desires to lash out against those regulations which may limit expression, than in our desires to formulate the philosophy which we wish to express in the first place. We seem to be more anxious to express half-baked philosophies than to develop our points of view completely.

The AAAS delegates currently on this campus are concerned with ideas rather than means of expression. They are thinking instead of marching, they are discussing instead of rioting, they are confronting solutions instead of grumbling about the confines of parliamentary procedure.

Let us follow this example. We are forced to live with regulations and according to the standards of others here, (and unfortunately for the idealist), we always will be. But in the arena of thought and philosophy there are no limitations. If we can but resolve ourselves to inner development and self-expansion—instead of continually elaborating minor disruptions of expression into major concerns—our college years may be more productive and happier. To be able to develop within confines is a mark of both maturity and creativity.

Let us be very sure of the causes we seek to defend. Let us be sure that they are worth defending. Let us be sure above all that we are living according to our innermost, most positive convictions. Let us rise above dress codes and curfews, and dwell on more vital matters.

"Why I Want to Come to ORU." Think back and think again.

Some very important values may have been developed in our naivete—in that time before we became so enthralled by trivia that our process of development became impaired.

Cautious—Not Communist

I was somewhat chagrined to hear from Mr. Boatwright that the guarantees of peace are training their .38's on me, my wife and my children. I do wish that other on this campus are having trouble reconciling the mission of the University with assurances to the Security Force. Sure, a policeman has every right to defend himself against an armed felon. The implications of the argument go somewhat further than that, though. Perhaps Mr. Boatwright has some statistics that I don't have, but I am not at all aware of just how many of ORU's peculiar brand of students are being committed to gun-pulling companies, until now. I haven't seen how our Security Force has found violators beneficial in the discovery or apprehension of the culprits.

No, and those who feel as I do are not communists; we have no concept of the importance of control or powers to keep law and order in our peaceful environment. We are trying to undermine and abolish one American institution—that of communists; do our part and others. The President's Corner

A letter of welcome

Welcome to Oral Roberts University. For several months, we have been looking forward to your arrival and the privilege of meeting with you in the days of this convention.

I know that many of you have been working diligently throughout the course of the year, formulating ideas about current problems that are plaguing the contemporary American scene. A lively discussion of these issues by informed delegates will, I hope, promote more active involvement of the students in all of our respective colleges and universities. This convention provides an opportunity for us to use the compulsion we have for a decaying world; it is one of the most effective tools that students may ever have to influence social conditions. I think it unfortunate that many students of other universities have gained so much attention from the media, while the students at Christ-centered colleges and universities—with a dynamic and optimistic outlook on life, have gone virtually unnoticed.

My greatest hope for this convention is that we will in some way have an impact on the future of our nation. Not only do we care about the problems facing us, but we also have solutions—inspired by the leadership of the Holy Spirit—that will help to bring about necessary reform.

COMMENTARY

Christ or man: who judges?

"Well, he looks like his hair long, and look at his clothes, how, blab, blab." Blah! That's exactly how it sounds to listen to Christians judging other Christians out of conformity with outside appearances.

There are so many Christians who have special "insight" into who is or is not a Christian, regardless of whether that person professes Christ or not. I just cannot believe that we are called to judge others. One needs only to observe the divisions which appear to see how wrong this is.

Two scriptures come readily to mind: "You must realize, then, that no one who is led by God's Spirit can say 'Jesus' in an evil spirit, and no one confuses Jesus' how unless he is guided by the Holy Spirit." (Good News for Modern Man, Vol. 1; p. 223.)

If this is true, how can we judge anyone who professes that "Christ is how." We cannot see into a person's heart. Therefore it seems we should leave the judging to the Lord.

The second verse: "There is no condemnation now for those who live in truth with Christ Jesus." (Romans 8:1)

If someone is wrong, can't we trust Jesus to show him the way and to take care of any situations that might arise from it? I can't find in my heart to believe that Christ would tell one person what is wrong with another. (Excluding discretion in the case of one's own personal salvation.)

Christ is powerful enough to speak for Himself.

When two Christians cannot share Jesus with each other because of very little differences, how can either one share Christ with unbelievers? We need to "get together" in Jesus. Who KNOWS? Some good of Christian love might be the result.

Larry Tolbert hurst his way to a four-hitter 7-1 victory over East Central last Friday.

Baseballers split double-header

The Oral Roberts University baseball team defeated East Central twice last Friday to run its winning streak to six before falling to a strong Creighton University team twice last Saturday.

The Titans, however, had picked up the pieces by Monday and downsed the Visitors, 5-2.

In return action against East Texas, split the doubleheader to bring their record to 11-4.

The ORU nine bumped East Central in two home games here last Friday, winning by scores of 7-1 and 13-6.

In the opener, Freshman Larry Tolbert pitched a four-hitter and aided his own cause with a three-run homer in the sixth. ORU had earlier broken the game open with a two-out triple in the fourth to erase a 1-1 tie.

In the nightcap, which was abbreviated in the middle of the fifth by agreement, last year's leading hitter, Sophomore Greg Davis, led Titan batters with three hits, including a double and a triple, batting in four runs. Another sophomore, Third baseman Floyd Brown, socked three singles in four trips to the plate and scored four times. ORU scored four runs in the first inning and five in the second to get the jump on the losers. Dave Root picked up the win in relief.

Saturday, however, was a different story, as ORU's six-game winning streak was ended by the clutch pitching and strong hitting of Creighton University, 9-2 and 8-5.

In the first game, the Titans were induced to four hits, while the Bluejays from Creighton hit two home runs, one in the first and another in the second off Jack Chenow, who sustained his first loss of the season.

Steve Cain was tagged with the loss in the second game, as Creighton jumped off to a 5-0 lead with a four-run third inning. Although the Titans rallied for four runs in their half of the third and scored again in the seventh, Creighton iced the game with a run in the fifth.

Monday afternoon's nine-inning tilt with Creighton saw a return to winning ways, though, as Rightfielder Jimmy Lee pitched a three-hitter and drove in three runs with a triple and a double to lead ORU to their 5-2 win.

The turning point in the game came in the sixth inning with a man on first and two out. Richard Rendel hit a ground ball down the middle which hit the umpire and was ruled a single, and Lee then came to the plate and hit his triple to put ORU into the lead.

"Creighton is probably as good as anybody we'll play and as strong a hitting team as we'll meet," Coach Herb Dallal declared after the win. "We made a lot of mental mistakes Saturday, but we were ready to play today and played about as good a game as we can play. Lee pitched a fine game."

Dallal remarked that the Titans had pinned the first loss of his college career on Creighton's pitcher, who had a 5-2 record before Monday and had basted last year's NCAA baseball champion, Southern California on a two-hitter last year.

Action today at 1:30 p.m. saw South Dakota University meet the Titans at Chief Benton Field for a doubleheader. Tomorrow, the ORU nine will travel to Topeka for a pair of games with Northeastern. South Dakota State will tangle with ORU in a doubleheader game 1:30 next Wednesday.

McQueen administers Undergraduate Record

by Marsha White

Dr. W. C. McQueen and his staff will be administering the Undergraduate Record Examination to approximately 130-160 ORU students today and tomorrow, March 26 and 27.

The Examination consists of three parts: Aptitude Test, Area Test, and Field Test. The Aptitude Test was given at 8 a.m. this morning in LRC 236-37 and the Area Test at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 27. The Field Test in most major areas will be administered in LRC 236-37 at 9 a.m. with the exceptions of Art in LRC 138, Theology in LRC 204E, and Communications Arts in LRC 232C.

All students who plan to receive an ORU degree before spring 1972 are required to take this exam now. Undergraduate Record Examinations requirements for two parts of the examination are waived for those students who have already taken the GRE Aptitude and Field Tests.

The three sections of the 90-minute aptitude test are designed to measure the verbal and mathematical abilities of college juniors and seniors. This test can also provide an indication of a student's performance on the GRE. According to Dr. McQueen, presented by a student on these tests are compared to the student's SAT scores. Study of the difference in the aptitude of the student entering and that of the same student leaving the University reveals to some degree how well ORU is achieving its objectives in the academic development of the student.

The Area Tests are intended to determine the student's general knowledge in the three comprehensive areas of the liberal arts: social sciences, humanities, and natural sciences. Scores from the field tests aim to reveal how well the ORU student is acquainting himself with his field of study as compared with the national average scores, provided by the Educational Testing Services. Students should receive their scores within four weeks.
