Senate invalidates A.S.B. election

Primary elections for Associated Student Body officers held Tuesday, April 20, were declared invalid at a special meeting of the Student Senate Wednesday evening for the following reasons:

- No provision for write-in candidates was made on the ballot.

- No secrecy was provided for marking the ballots.

Vice president Larry Scott has resigned from his position on the election committee in the wake of the invalidation.

Previously scheduled for campaign speeches, Thursday morning's assembly hour was revamped to allow for an open question-and-answer session with a panel comprised of Student Senate members Joleen Kelley, Pam Campbell, Sheryl Williams, Gary Cauble, Charles Redd and Senate Advisor Robert Voight.

New petitions due Wednesday

A new schedule for elections has been announced by President Charles Redd. Petitions will be available on Monday, April 26, in Dean Voight's office for all offices: ASB, judicial board, and class. All petitions turned in previously have been declared invalid. Petitions are due on Wednesday, April 28, at 4:30 p.m.

Primary speeches will be on Thursday, April 29 at 10:00 a.m. on fifth floor of the LRC. Primary elections for all offices will be held on Friday, April 30.

On Tuesday, May 4, general elections will be held from 8:00-4:30 in two voting places: LRC and the cafeteria.

"Attendance will be taken at both primary and final speeches so that no student can say he doesn't know the candidates or issues," according to ASB President, Charles Redd.

Redd promises more efficiency

Redd went on to say, "I regret that the student body has to go through another confusing time about election. I will be personally chairing the Election Committee, composed of the entire Student Senate. I promise you that this will be the most efficiently run election the student body has ever seen. I'm asking all of you to try to forget about the past and help make this the sort of election we can all be proud of."

Previous invalidation moves during the 1970-71 term have involved the freshman class elections and a constitutional amendment vote sponsored by commuter students.

OIL convenes for 1971 session

Brian Stalwick heads ORU delegation

by Cindy Davis

The 1971 spring session of the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Legislature (OIL) convened yesterday in the Senate and House chambers of the state legislature in Oklahoma City.

Representing ORU at the session are Brian Stalwick, delegation chairman and senator; Laurann Harmon, senator; Cindy Davis, representative Stuart Bowen, representative; and Steve Pittendigh, representative. The students will also serve on several committees: Revenue and Taxation, Public Affairs and Public Health, Agricultural, Internal Operations, and Roads and Highways.

Former Governor Dewey Bartlett welcomed the student legislators to the opening session Wednesday night. Other speakers will include: Governor David Hall or Lieutenant-Governor George Nigh; Attorney General Larry Derryberry; and U.S. Representative Thomas Stafford will address the students at a banquet Saturday night.

The OIL was created less than two years ago as a student legislative body patterned after the Oklahoma Legislature. It is a unified body of more than 26 colleges and universities, affording students a means of communicating their ideas about specific issues and political questions to those in public office who wish to receive such ideas. Students participating in this process offer substantive legislative proposals and through discussion and debate receive valuable experiences in government and the legislative process.

Since the beginning of OIL, some 75 pieces of legislation have been passed by both houses and signed by OIL governors. The bills cover a wide scope of topics including: lowering the voting age, establishing uniform integration of public schools, establishing uniformity in marriage laws, requirements for professional qualifications for county coroners, establishing a department of pollution control, redefining probate procedure and redefining the procedures for recounting election ballots. Several OIL bills are now under consideration by the state legislature. One, creating a free loan program for medical students who agree to practice in rural Oklahoma, is now under discussion.

Coed wins 'Miss Oklahoma City' title

Freshman Stephanie Smay to compete in 'Oklahoma' pageant

by Stephanie Smay

as told to Marsha White

"God can do anything if He can make me a queen," exclaims Stephanie Smay, the newly crowned Miss Oklahoma City. "I really don't think it has hit me yet."

Saturday evening, April 17, this ORU freshman was chosen to wear the crown of her hometown. The twelve contenders, selected in the March 7 preliminaries, were judged in three categories: evening gown, talent, and swimsuit. Stephanie also won the talent award.

"I can see how the Lord worked in the whole thing. He supplied most of my wardrobe through my sponsor who loaned me $400 worth of clothes; I only had to buy a bathing suit. Oh, and my teeth—in the preliminaries I was wearing braces. Then they were removed the week before the pageant; my front teeth were apart about half an inch. Look, the Lord moved them together and the dentist marveled as he placed the small temporary filling between them!"

Stephanie tried to relive Saturday once again. "Rehearsals continued from 8:00 to 1:00. The Lord knew that I had had no modeling, but being number 12, I was allowed to practice walking on the ramp more than anyone else. I even sat in as the winner."

"I became really discouraged when I practiced my song with the band," she continued. "We just couldn't get together. I went home. Six of my friends from here came later that afternoon and we had a prayer meeting in which we asked the Lord to anoint the band. They also asked that I be released from all nervousness. I had such peace."

"That evening four of us Christian contestants prayed before the pageant began. Evening gown competition was first. I believe that my smile was genuine from the beginning. Looking at the one way signs of my friends seated around the ramp, I could do nothing except smile about the Lord."

"During the talent presentation, I experienced no nervousness. I played part of Mendelssohn's "Piano Concerto" and "O Happy Day" and sang "Put Your Hand in the Hand of the Man from Galilee" with the band. The group was great. All of the Russians sponsor movie

The movie "Russia With Love" will be shown by the Russian Club Wednesday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m. in Zoppelt Auditorium. Admission is $.25. Russian club members with club cards will be admitted free.

German meal planned

The Deutscher Verein (German Club) will sponsor a German meal next Friday, April 30, at 6:30 p.m. at the dining hall of the Southern Hills Baptist Church, according to Dave Connor, president. Tickets will go on sale next week.

Oracle wins awards

The ORACLE received third place in editorial and sports writing at the spring workshop of the Oklahoma Collegiate Press Association (OCPA) held last Friday, April 16. Six members of the various university publications received the awards presented at a formal luncheon at Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee, Oklahoma.

More than twenty state, private, and junior colleges belong to the journalism association. ORU is one of the youngest members, having joined just last semester.

Junior-senior banquet set for May 3

This year for the first time the Junior-Senior Banquet will be held off campus. The date is set for May 3, at the Gaslight Dinner Theatre. The meal will be a buffet, served from 7 to 7:30 p.m.

As is traditional, seniors will be admitted free. For other students tickets will be on sale in the dining commons until 6 p.m. each night through April 28. The cost is $5.00 per plate. Commuters and faculty may obtain their tickets in Mrs. Inbody's office, east wing of the first floor of the women's dorm, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day.

The Gaslight Theatre is located east on 91st, near Memorial Drive.

The theme of this year's banquet is "Under the Lamppost Bright." Entertainment will be provided by "Love Song," a folk-rock group of the Jesus Movement; "The New Life," ORU's own Christian rock group; Dave Stearman and Cindy Johnson's in song; and John Bayley. Seating is limited and by reservation only.

Students find teaching challenging, fun...

by Mary Lou Davidson

"What have I gotten into?" "Man, what a challenge!" "I'm scared!" "How will I ever learn all their names?" "What will they think of me?" These were some of the thoughts registered by ORU-educated student teachers as they reflected on their first week in the classroom. Some observed, and many others began teaching one class or at most two, with one notable exception. Doug Foster's supervising teacher did not show up and he taught four classes upper-level mathematics. Debbie Francis, doing her student teaching at Marshall Elementary, works with kindergarten children. She deals with 100 children each day, 50 in the morning and 50 more in the afternoon session. In a word, teaching kindergarten is "tiring." She continued, "You have to tie shoes, mend tears, skip with them, sit on the floor and play blocks with them. It's fun, but tiring because they have so much energy." Marcena Scroggs is teaching second grade at Key Elementary. When she walked into the room for the first time, "I didn't think of anything. I was kind of numb. Then I thought, 'Man, what a challenge!'" The children sing songs for her and write poems to her, typical of second-grade devotion. Two of Pearl Vandenberghe's third-grade boys had already confessed by the end of the first week that they were in love with her. The second morning she was there someone had brought her a dozen daffodils. Pearl's enthusiastic response to her students is, "They're a riot. They're great. It's been the greatest week for me in a long time. It's been a lot of hard work, but it's been great."

When Julie Hurlbut walked into the sixth-grade classroom at Grissom Elementary where she'll be teaching for the next 7 weeks, she thought, "What a nice room. I wonder what's going to happen in the time I spend here student teaching." Two of the problems she sees in her job as teacher are getting used to ordering people's lives, "which is what you have to do with children," and keeping the child's needs uppermost in her mind—not allowing enthusiasm for her subject matter to obscure this vital concern.

An evaluation of secondary schools students' attitudes was given by Steve Dessinger, who is teaching U.S. and World History to tenth and eleventh-graders at Memorial High School. "Kids' thinking has changed from what it was when I was in high school. Things that once were taken for granted, such as morals, no longer are. In discussing values, the teachers must begin all over to construct them. We're going to have to really think. Kids won't believe you, just because you're a teacher. They want you to be able to back up what you say. Kids are looking (teachers) over."

Ray explains 'stair-step' preparation

Of ORU's 1000 students, nearly 200 are either education majors or minors, according to Dr. Mauldin Ray, chairman of the Education Department. This means that 20 percent of all students presently enrolled will ultimately "practice teach"—a 9-credit activity usually reserved for the eighth semester.

For both education majors and minors the last semester of the senior year also includes professional education "block" courses: psychological tests and measurements, and methods of teaching.

A secondary education minor requires 21 hours of professional education courses.

Among the prerequisite courses in the education department is "Social Foundations of Education" which is taken no later than the second semester of the sophomore year. This course is the first in what Dr. Ray calls "the stair step of experiences to fuse theory with practice."

As a part of the Social Foundations course, students are required to work as teacher aides in one of five schools participating. The purpose of the aid program is to give students exposure to the public-school teaching-learning environment so that they may better determine their own suitability for a teaching career. The aides are directly supervised by the cooperating principals.

The second level of "fusion" is experience as observers in the methods courses offered for the junior year. At this time, students make application for student teaching in order that the education department can assist prospective teachers in planning beneficial summer work experiences.

Student teaching is the final "stair step" in fusing theory and practice. Students may express a preference as to where they wish to be placed in the Tulsa Public School system. Actual intern teaching is supervised by an experienced Cooperating Teacher and is a 9-week, full-time project. Students teach on the level (elementary or secondary) of their training with students in the kindergarten-through-grade-12 program splitting the nine weeks between the levels on a 5-4 week ratio.

judges were smiling. I really wanted to love those people, not merely entertain them.

"The swimsuit competition preceded the selection of the five finalists. When my name was announced among those of the finalists, my attitude began to change. Of course, I wanted to win, but at that point, I knew that win or lose, I had done my best. I no longer felt like a clod; a feminine shell just enveloped me as I answered the judges' question, "Why do you want to be Miss Oklahoma?"

"To be Miss Oklahoma," she recalled, "I feel that it will help me to better myself so that I can love others more. In a book, dear to me, the Bible, it says to love my neighbor as myself. I must love the person that I am, not in conceit, in order to have more genuine love for others."

"As the runners-up were announced, my best friend in the pageant took second place. I just cried as the crown was placed on my head. With the title I was awarded a $250 scholarship and a wardrobe and I have the privilege of driving a 1971 Challenger convertible until the Miss Oklahoma pageant in June. But those things are not the most important.

"The Lord let me win in order to change me inside. He let me see that as children of God, we are all supposed to prosper and be important in this world in order to spread His Word. I had lost previous pageants, but I believe that in due season, if you faint not, you shall reap. Just keep trying. I now have Christ-confidence.

What free time?

College students are busy people. Just ask anyone around here—if you can stop him long enough to get in a question and an answer—about free time. Busy-ness is not bad. In fact, Christians who accept the responsibilities which are given them and try to rise to some of the challenges presented them are apt to be very busy people.

But in all our involvement we all too often forget the value of solitude. Too many people rush into their rooms and immediately switch on the radio, TV, or stereo, then try to concentrate on things which are really important enough to merit complete attention. It seems we're almost afraid of being alone. The quietness is disconcerting, perhaps because there are internal conflicts which come too clearly to light if there are no external distractions. It's easier to sing along with the radio than to sit quietly and allow our minds to rest, or organize our thoughts.

When it seems that we are surrounded on all sides by pressing obligations, we don't stop to draw from our Source. Instead, we rush ahead, trying to manage everything for ourselves, cramming every minute with activity, vainly attempting to get it all done. We leave no time for leisure for either mind or body. We have forgotten that, "thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, in returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and confidence shall be your strength." (Isa. 30:15). Or as Toki Miyashina paraphrased in the World Christian Digest:

The Lord is my Pacesetter, I will not rush.
He makes me stop and rest for quiet intervals.
He provides me with stillness, which restores my serenity.
He leads me in ways of efficiency, through calmness of mind; and His guidance is peace.
Even though I have a great many things to accomplish each day,
I will not fret, for His presence is here.
His timelessness, His all-importance will keep me in balance.
He prepares refreshment and renewal in the midst of my activity
By anointing my mind with His oils of tranquillity.
My cup of joyous energy overflows.
Surely harmony and effectiveness shall be the fruits of my hours,
And I shall walk in the peace of the Lord forever.
—Mary Lou Davidson

Readers dispute Lt. Calley verdict

Do you think Lt. Calley's sentence to life in prison is justifiable?

Ken Johnson: If Calley is guilty, and the judicial system has granted that he is, then there is no reason to let him go because others as guilty are free. American society says we should let him go because he was "simply obeying orders." But in WW II, the Germans claimed they were "simply obeying orders" when they massacred the Jews; we convicted them because they had obeyed what we considered an immoral order.

Mary Bacon: It's strange people sympathize with the murderer and not the relatives of the victims.

David Stearman: I think they ought to courtmartial him and then let him go. War atrocities are ridiculous because war is an atrocity.

Allan Clayton: I don't feel it is justified for a nation to sentence a man for an action that was responsible by powers that were above him. It wasn't his decision that they should go into this village. He received orders.

Alieu Fye: It's justified because of the simple reason that he knew he was killing the people . . . not that he was obeying orders. He was doing what he wanted. My personal opinion, when I thought things over was, that he did this because he was fed up with Vietnam and just wanted to kill.

Steve Durgin: Yes, but I don't agree with the conviction. The man was sent over there to do a job. It was self-preservation.

Stuart Parker: I think it will have to be changed because of public opinion—by President Nixon or by another court-martial.

Paul Honess: Killing those people is not justifiable but condemnation of that man by orders of his superiors is not justifiable either.

La Von Altnow: Yes, I feel it is. I have a cousin who was in Vietnam. He says the women and children are armed and that our military men can't trust anyone. However, there's no excuse under any circumstances for mass murder.

Alan Walker: I've mixed emotions. I think what he's done is very wrong, and he doesn't deserve to get away with it. On the other hand, others have done it. Life imprisonment won't solve any problems.

Betsy Pike: I don't see why they couldn't clear it up and say, "If it's war, it's justifiable." That's the way I would see it.

Herb Yates: I'm not sure. I'd like to see more data on the psychological aspects. Possibly he does have mental problems and if so they should be worked out. If he doesn't, I think he should be released because war is war.

Nancy Alheim: No. Just sticking him in a jail won't solve his real problem. Especially with the conditions of the American jails now. Not enough money is going into the jail programs to work on these men psychologically or offer them something. Life imprisonment is horrible. What does he look forward to?

A new view of Contact . . .

Cut, take 201

by Cliff Taulbert

It all began with a phone call from the office of President Roberts and I was off to Hollywood. Whisked away by a Viscount jet, I found myself in the land of earthquakes, stars, and the studio for the "Contact" special.

I renewed friendship with the World Action Singers and met some beautiful people. But more than this I discovered that Jesus Christ was very real in studio "C." There were more lights in the studio than one could imagine. The actual set was in no way representative of the finished product we will see. Everything was simulated; only the people were real. The set for "Festival" was no different. Or was it?

Shooting started at 6:30 p.m. and it seemed as if hundreds of people came from nowhere. Everyone was a director and everyone wanted to be a star. All one could hear was "cut, take 201." Constant running to dressing rooms, calling for make-up men, changing lights, and smiles seemed to be the nature of a television production.

The voice of Producer Dick Ross echoed through the studio and President Roberts walked to the forefront and led the audience in prayer. "Festival" had begun. The audience became very quiet, the singers took their places and as President Roberts prayed, the atmosphere changed and the Spirit of Christ could be felt. The props, the fake trees, the simulated scenes and music took on a new meaning. The stage men, the crew, all seemed to have been working with a purpose. In spite of the "cuts" and "retakes," it was evident that the star of "Festival," Jesus Christ, had taken center stage. The audience seemed captivated by the obvious presence of Christ. Yes, studio "C" was now a place where men could meet a great star.

Forty million Americans will watch the Youth "Contact" special. They will be unaware of the hard work involved. They will not see the burning lights, the running make-up, nor will they see the 2-minute costume changes. They will never hear the endless cry of "take it from the top, Group." They will see a finished product of smiles, songs and a sermon that will touch their heart and meet their needs. The television audience might not know it, but Jesus Christ was hanging in there, keeping faces smiling and preparing our hearts to hear his message each time the director said, "cut, take 201."

Prayer group expresses concern

Jesus is concerned about you and the needs and problems which arise in your life on campus. There is a campus community prayer group which would like to share your needs and problems with the Lord.

Perhaps you could take your pen and paper right now and let us know your thoughts so we can pray specifically for you.

Just a tho't

Apes have a very low crime rate

Apes have a very low crime rate. They pay no taxes, never go to war, never go into debt. They have no population explosion nor any threatened food shortage. No one has to spend big ad dollars to tell them, "Never put bananas in the refrigerator." They don't need a beautification program because they don't spoil their surroundings. They don't pollute their air; don't waste their water. Their government is a model of efficiency and simplicity. True, they don't have Scotch whisky, cellophane, jet planes, ice cubes or pro football, but they have established a balanced equilibrium with their natural environment. If, a hundred million years ago, an apelike creature came swinging out of the trees and said, "I'm going to stand on two feet, call myself MAN, and build a better world" . . . isn't it about time he got started?

Netters stand at 21-3, whip Tulsa, Arkansas

The Titan netters advanced to a 21-3 record by defeating Tulsa University and Arkansas in competition here last week.

ORU shut out TU with a 7-0 score Wednesday. Arkansas proved to be a very strong team last Friday, forcing four of the five singles matches into three sets. Peter Van Lingen was the only man to win in two sets (6-2, 6-2). Nevertheless, Arkansas could win only one singles producing a final score of 6-1.

The tennis team will be facing some of their strongest opponents in the near future. On May 4, the netters will travel to Durant to meet Southeastern Oklahoma State, ranked No. 2 in the NAIA Conference. The Titans will face Arkansas and Oklahoma University in away matches April 26 and May 8.

Commenting on the remaining matches this season, Coach Bernis Duke said, "All our final matches, with the exception of one team, should be very close. They could go either way."

Golfers win first tourney

Set course record, add 20 match victories

by Ken Holmgren

The Oral Roberts University golf team picked up its first tournament victory ever last weekend and set a new 18-hole team course record of 289, added twenty dual match wins to their record in the process.

Playing against twenty other colleges including the University of Tulsa in the Joplin (Mo.) Invitational Tournament last Saturday, the Titan linksters as a team (taking the best four scores) were only one over par with their 289 first place and record finish. Last year in an eight-team field on the same course, Arkansas University won with 306.

In a special challenge feature at the tournament, each of the teams paired their top five scores against those of all the other teams represented, and thus used the course on a match play basis against all the other teams. As a result, ORU also picked up twenty wins at the tournament, which are added to their record as official wins. Thus, in addition to bringing home a big trophy with them, the Titans also brought back a 31-1 mark. The closest team in the match play feature scored only four-and-a-half points against the Titans on a 16-point basis.

ORU's Jim Fowler was co-medalist for the day, firing a two-under-par 70. Other Titans contributing to the win were Mike Webb with a par 72; Dave Barr, one over par; and Gary Lee, who shot a 74. Ted Gellert had a four-over-par 76.

Coach Myron Peace was elated over the tournament win, indicating that the team is progressing well according to a four- or five-year plan to be a championship contender. Looking forward to next year, he noted that the team will lose only Team Captain Ted Gellert.

In other golf action prior to the Saturday tourney, ORU beat Creighton University 14-2 in home action last Wednesday. The first Titan loss this season was registered in a triangular meet at Oklahoma City last Thursday as Central State downed the home linksters 10-6, while ORU beat Oklahoma City University, 8 1/2 to 6 1/2.

"They deserved to beat us," Coach Peace commented on the loss, noting that "we didn't perform well and they were just a better team that day." Earlier this season, ORU had edged the presently reigning champs in the Intercollegiate Conference by a 10-7 margin.

The Titan linksters met Southeastern State at home on the Meadowbrook Golf Course yesterday, and hosted a dual meet with Oklahoma University here this afternoon.

New collegiate sport?

Wrestling intramurals begin

Wrestling . . . battle of wits, muscle power, skill, and strategies. "This total body sport," according to Wrestling Instructor Myron Peace, "may become a varsity sport at ORU in the near future. But we have received no official word from the sports directors to begin a recruiting program. Right now the sports directors are interested in the further development of the sports we already have."

Although wrestling is not a varsity sport at ORU, it is thriving. Fifty students have taken to the mats for wrestling instruction under Coach Peace. Starting this week, April 26-28, the men's intramural wrestling program will bring out possible wrestling potential. Interest in the intramural tournament may also have some influence on the timetable of development of the wrestling as a collegiate sport.

"Currently the university is in the public relations stage of wrestling development. During Christmas, ORU hosted an annual wrestling tournament with the top high schools in the state present. Several state champions have already expressed their desire to attend ORU if a major wrestling program is instituted."

"With the completion of the Special Events Center, we will have one of the finest wrestling facilities in the nation. The Tulsa community and the ORU student body have expressed a great deal of enthusiasm for wrestling as another winning sport to occupy this facility."
