Chambers Singers to perform motet

Under the direction of Raffaele Catanzariti, the Chamber Singers will present an hour-long program in Tjmk-Barton Hall at 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 23. Featured on the agenda is Bach's Motet II, "Der Geist Hilft Unser Schwachheit Nuf" (The Spirit Also Helpeth Us).

The motet, originally composed as funeral music in 1729, will be sung with the accompaniment of a small orchestra—eight strings and four woodwinds. The German Lyrics are based upon Romans 8:26.

Contrary to what one would expect the mood of a funeral song to be, the selection is almost dance like and cheerful. "This number ties in very well with the discussions in chapel concerning the workings of the Holy Spirit," said Catanzariti. "Back in Bach's day death didn't appear so bleak. This is happy music."

The singers will divide their presentation into four groups. English madrigals, French chansons, the Bach motet, followed by a German spoof song, and contemporary numbers.

Members of the 23-voice ensemble are, sopranos—Honey Bee Anderson, Sheila Arthurs, Charlotte Curry, Gayla Lewis, Sue Yoakum, and Spyce Stover; altos Becky Fields, Tammy Hayunga, Faith Kirshman, Ruth Thompson, Esther Walling, and Judy Hartman; tenors Les Corbin, Bob Humble, David Koch, James Roth, and Dick Slane; basses David Curry, Pat Mason, Gerald Roberts, Bill Steere, Tim Thomas, and Bob Barker. The accompanist is Diane Story.

Dave Joffrion, one of several performers in last Saturday's All-School Talent Show, accompanied himself on the guitar as he sang two Jesus folk songs of his own composition. Also included on the program were guests "Mazepa" and "the Crank Case" and others.

House proposes $15.4 billion tax cut

The House this week passed by voice vote a controversial package of business and individual tax cuts totaling $15.4 billion over three years, keyed to President Nixon's new economic program. Benefits for individuals are concentrated largely in the lower-income brackets, with all individual taxpayers receiving some relief.

Nixon announces Moscow visit

President Nixon announced this week that he will visit Moscow next May. Nixon said the trip to Moscow will be independent from the Peking visit—scheduled some time before May 1—and that both are for the purpose of discussing bilateral matters between the two countries. Nixon also said his discussions with Russian leaders would include strategic arms limitation, the Middle East and "a number of other areas where presently the U.S. and the Soviet Union are having negotiations." Accompanying Nixon to both Peking and Moscow will be Secretary of State William P. Rogers and national security adviser Henry A. Kissinger.

Meir rules out troop proposal

Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir ruled out this week as totally unacceptable the return of Egyptian troops to the east bank of the Suez Canal as part of a special Suez Canal agreement. Mrs. Meir gave her policy outline in a two-hour, free-wheeling discussion following the six-point presentation of Secretary of State William P. Rogers before the U.N. General Assembly earlier this week.

Academic chairmen advise wingmates

Did you receive a midsemester unsatisfactory report? If you did, your academic chairman wants to help you. He is prepared to help you to find a tutor or to guide you to the right study group.

Academic chairmen have already been elected on each hall and a tutoring system is presently being organized. The women's academic vice-president, Lana Scott, believes, "This year there has been a great improvement in the organization of the academic program in the dorms. Various groups have been formed for collective study the night before exams, and quiet hours have been established to aid students in accomplishing their goals." There is also stricter enforcement of curfew for students on academic probation.

Commenting on the program in the men's dorm, men's academic vice-president Gary Crafton reported that the study lounge has been moved to what was formerly the old TV lounge where there is better lighting, carpeting, and less noise. "On each wing we have also opened up a room for private study and for students who need to complete assignments late at night."

"We want the person in need to come to the realization that he needs help and to go to his academic adviser," Crafton continued. "Once he comes to us we will direct him to someone to help him in the dorm, to Mrs. Marie Fischer in the Counseling Center at the base of the Prayer Tower or to his faculty adviser."

"The success of the program depends upon student participation and cooperation," he noted.

Many freshmen approve of the collective method of studying for such classes as humanities, psychology, and biology where every one can benefit from the pooling of knowledge and popcorn surpluses. But others feel that these groups are not effective and individual study is the best way to learn. One student remarked, "The groups move too slowly, and not much is accomplished." Most of those that have had a real need for tutoring have arranged for extra help with the aid of their wing adviser.

Senior Susan Eskridge stresses the importance of individual effort, "Freshmen have to learn new study habits. You learn to study as you mature." Another senior, Cheryl Evans, who has been an inspiration to the girls on her wing believes, "As you get older, it hits you how important studying and learning really are."

Studying is a matter of giving as well as of personal discipline. "In order to improve the academic condition of dormitory life," commented Lana Scott, "the student body must be willing to give their talents and time to help those in need of intellectual stimulation." Anyone interested in tutoring should contact Lana at extension 2270 or Gary at extension 2555.

The canopy which has been removed from the Women's High Rise to facilitate the building of reception hall, moves to its new home across from the men's parking lot. The 11-ton structure will serve as a shelter and waiting area for public transport customers.

Scholarship forms ready

Applications for two $500 scholarships to be awarded to two students participating in the Christian Service Council ministries are available in the Chaplain's Office, room 309, LRC. Deadline for filing applications is Nov. 1.

The scholarships, which will be awarded this fall by the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association, are sponsored by a fund begun in December 1967 "to express our love and appreciation for President and Mrs. Oral Roberts and our deep interest in sponsoring World Action Students."

Howard Dessinger, chairman of the scholarship committee, declared, "ORU students are important to the OREA employees over here. The scholarship fund gives us a direct connection to ORU students and provides an opportunity to participate in a tangible way with ORU students."

Criteria used in selecting scholarship recipients are based primarily on past and present participation of the student, who must be a full-time junior or senior, in a CSC ministry. Applicants must show a definite financial need.

According to Dessinger, at least one $500 scholarship will be offered next semester.

Maynard heads Saga

by Ruth Figi

How does Jay Maynard, the new Food Service Director for the Oral Roberts University cafeteria, snack bar, and other feeding operations, keep humble? By remembering when he didn't know so much about food!

"When I was a country boy in college," he said, "some people asked me out to eat, and I wanted to make a good impression. I hadn't eaten at very many good restaurants, and when they asked me to order, I saw filet mignon, which I had heard was supposed to be good, and ordered it. The waitress said they had none left, so I answered, 'Well, give me some other kind of fish then.' The waitress started to tell me off, but my host said, 'Let me order for you' and that relieved some of the embarrassment!"

Maynard, who has spent the last five years at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, Tex., commented, "Saga likes to transfer us about every three to five years, for new environment and fresh ideas. I had heard much about ORU and was glad for the transfer!"

What is Saga! "Saga represents the last letters of an Indian tribe close to Geneva, N.Y., that had a long name starting with 'k' and ending with 'saga.' Since it was too long, the company was named Saga," Maynard explained. "It was started by three college students in their senior year who took over the food service at Hobart College in Geneva. The first year they only made about $86 profit, but it was a successful year. Each succeeding year the company grew."

Maynard, who graduated from Southwestern Seminary with a masters in theology, never entered the ministry, but began working with the YMCA. "One day the president of the college I graduated from asked me to be food service director for him. When I told him I knew nothing about it, he said the college would send me to school to learn the food business! I went to Texas Tech, took foods and nutrition and cafeteria management during the summer, and operated the cafeteria the next fall."

"I am interested in food and always have been," confessed Maynard. "I like to make food as attractive and tasty as it can be. My wife can still out-bake me, but it's a fact that every once in a while she turns the cooking over to me!"

One of Maynard's favorite recipes, the Green Goddess dressing, is served at ORU. "It came from the Palace Restaurant in San Francisco and is one of the best recipes," he observed. "Although several companies have copies, the one thing they leave out is the chopped anchovies. They can't put that in a bottle, because they don't know yet how to preserve it."

"The only authority on food is the person eating it himself," stated Jay Maynard. "If a student tells me he doesn't like something, I can't say, 'Well, you ought to like it because I like it! He is an authority on what he likes to eat.'"

There is a SAGA master menu but local tastes influence what we eat at ORU. "Because of my background," Maynard said, "I may tend to feature the southern menu. You probably won't find black-eyed peas and cornbread up in the northern schools, but this is where our food committee comes in. They can bring in variety."

Problems? Here at ORU, the biggest problem in feeding the student body is keeping the bread fresh from beginning to end. "We keep it covered, and we're working on it!" Mr. Maynard smiled. "Also, this is an operation where a person can eat all he wants and not have any waste. That is why SAGA puts up the sign, 'Take one, come back for more!' It's a restriction on waste, not on how much the student eats."

The question always asked Jay Maynard is, "Why aren't you a preacher?" His answer is, "I was disillusioned when I left the seminary and went into secular work. I wasn't as close to God as I should have been. Since coming to this campus, I have found an atmosphere with a genuine Christian spirit. It is contagious. My whole family life has been changed, and I've reevaluated my own values in life. I see that God can use me in the work I'm doing now."

Festival slated

The first in what is proposed to be a worldwide series of city Jesus Music Festivals is presently taking place here in Tulsa.

The event, which began last night at McClure Park, will be offered again tonight at 8 o'clock at the same location. Saturday night at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the festival will be presented in LaFortune Stadium.

Featured in the festival will be Andrae Crouch and the Disciples (soul music) and the "Philharmonic" from Los Angeles (Jesus rock). Various local groups that will also participate in the festivals include ORU's "The Awakening," Ghetto Youth Singers, Sound System from First Baptist, the Light (a part of the Campus Crusade), Any Day Now and J. C. Love.

This festival, which is organized by Donald E. Hill, head of the Christos Foundation, said the idea of the foundation and the international series of festivals came about from an appearance of Andrae Crouch and the Disciples in another Jesus Music Festival last June.

Can racial unity become reality?

One of the assets of the diversities characteristic of the student body at Oral Roberts University is the opportunity each student has to become acquainted with the culture, beliefs, practices, and viewpoints of several different groups, denominations, and nationalities. To students who are products of static, less metropolitan backgrounds this wide variety of exposure is a boon, with the almost inevitable result of developing more realistic thinkers and a student body that evaluates with open mind and open Bible, ideas advocated by the surrounding community.

Great diversity, however, also opens the door to misunderstanding, and disunity. A Christian university is no exception to this, and one need look no further than relationships with others on his wing to see this pitfall. Personal relationships often fail to grow, as lack of understanding separates students from their peers, often subtly and unintentionally.

Going upon the assumption that the majority of ORU students are Christians, there is one common ground upon which we all can meet—in our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. He is the Person we all share a common interest in and can gather around for really genuine fellowship.

Why then do we not experience more of a unity about the person of Christ? A student commentary on the "Grapevine" this past week has pointed out a lack of unity between black and white students on this campus. Certainly there are no outwardly racist movements on either side, but there are clearly two sides not in complete unity. The question is whether it is too idealistic to believe there can be complete unity between Christian blacks and whites.

The thing we should guard against is further polarization of the groups in question. How can this be accomplished? By bringing both groups together in fellowship around Jesus Christ. While both blacks and whites do come from different cultures, if they share Him, can they not have some agreement?

If there is not this interaction between the groups, can there be understanding? It seems not. And here is where the problem arises. Some whites can more easily mix with blacks and vice versa. Some on both sides have had a background more conducive to interracial fellowship. Those who haven't, however, find it much easier to settle into a pattern where they do not necessarily exhibit openly hostile attitudes against the other race, but omit developing healthy relationships with them. And that is where most of us find ourselves.

There is no easy answer to this problem. It involves work, tolerance, and a good sense of humor. Even with these, it will fail if Christ is not the center of the answer. If He cannot help implement an answer to a question as important as this, let's find a God who can.

This university will have failed to fulfill God's plan for unity if it fails to erase this subtle racial misunderstanding. If an answer is to be found, it will require effort on both sides. Faith without the work of Christian love is dead. —KGH

AP article stimulates response

Students renounce hippie accusation

A lengthy Associated Press article entitled "Tulsa, God's Country" recently circulated nationwide in newspapers has caused student fervor. The article mainly explores the ministries of President Roberts and Billy James Hargis, anti-communist crusader.

According to the article, ORU "has not been touched with the unrest which struck many campuses in recent years. But the students evince signs of change. Hair on some male students is long, seedy-looking hippies, said one ORU critic, and drugs reportedly are used by some students."

Student comment in response to this article includes:

Kenneth Barker: The author of this article is plainly displaying his ignorance when he writes things he knows nothing about. He has taken erroneous opinions out of context and used them to mislead. If a man knows nothing about a subject, let him keep his mouth shut and his pen silent. His inspiration certainly wasn't from the Lord, but I'm sure Jesus would forgive him.

Linda Mix: There are some who wear hair lengths that are not becoming to bright and lively Christians, but they are certainly not seedy—a term which indicates dirt and filth.

Joanie Gordon: There are a few people here on drugs, but it's a relatively small number compared to the number on most campuses. As far as looking like seedy hippies, a lot of students would probably be much happier if they could!

Dave Langford: The article is so evidently filled with inconsistencies and discrepancies that it defeats its own purpose of impartial objective reporting. Anybody with any minute knowledge of the situation would laugh it off as trash.

Milton Redding: I think the author needs much prayer to help him in his own personal feelings toward people he does not really know. I hope that a response to his article can be sent directly to him to correct the false statements made.

Hubert Gardner: I believe that the author is not aware of the entire situation here in Tulsa, whether it be race, religion, or drugs. The writer takes insignificant points and projects them out of proportion. Tulsa is not quite the utopia that Billy describes it to be. Also, I wish people would stop criticizing what they don't understand about Oral and his ministry. They ought to check out what they hear about ORU—and not spread rumors or opinions.

Larry Jones: The article shows Billy James Hargis as the fundamental evangelist crusading for the freedom of all America against the evils of the world, which is basically good. But at the same time it gives Oral Roberts and the university an air of being a commercial foundation, along with its rising problems, existing for profit.

Ismael Gonzalez: It is obvious the writer is trying to push the Hargis project for some reason not known to us, at the cost of downgrading an institution he obviously knows very little about.

Tom Benson: I was flabbergasted to read what this author had written about our school and our president. It seemed to me that all he said was aimed at destroying anything that God had raised up, even to the extent of using incorrect, outdated, and misinterpreted information.

Aritisitis needs high criteria

Dear editor:

The ORU community seems to have contracted a rare disease—"aritisitis."

Though you won't find "aritisitis" listed in any book of rare medical cases, you'll discover its infectious existence in almost any formal aggregation of the ORU community.

The symptoms were first evident the latter part of the second semester 1971. At the close of performances of some worth, various individuals, madly applauding, jumped to their feet, spawning a wave of rising people which flowed throughout the entire assembly with epidemic swiftness—a frightful scene!

It seems then that "aritisitis" is characterized by an intense desire to rise in applause when responding to performances of any merit.

The only known cure for the disease is the establishment of higher criteria for the standing ovation.

The persistence of the disease will result in the loss of a rich expression of audience approval. The standing ovation should be reserved for those performances of exceptional merit; it must not be used just to make people happy or just to make the audience appear gracious! There is nothing ungracious in a rousing applause from a seated assembly.

If judiciously employed, the standing ovation is a marvelous tribute; if prompted by "aritisitis," an ugly rash.

Senate Soundings

Senate tables ACS proposal

Due to a lack of time, Senate last Tuesday tabled the proposed Associated Commuter Students (ACS) amendment. Presented by junior class treasurer Jim Kirby, the amendment is an attempt on the part of the commuter students to integrate themselves totally into the Oral Roberts University student life.

As reported in last week's ORACLE, "the ACS would be set up as both the AWS and AMS presently are, with four vice-presidents for spiritual, social, athletic, and academic activities and a secretary. All leaders would be commuters."

Although ORU is primarily a resident school and the commuters are in the minority, this minority has needs that should be met. Commuters have special problems that resident students can't begin to comprehend. When commuters leave this campus after classes, they are isolated. They have no contact with the resident students, and many times not even with other commuters. While on campus, commuters usually have no more interaction with students than that in the classroom. The need for official, organized activities is apparent. Another problem that commuter students face is the needs of the married students. At least half of the commuters are married. They, too, deserve an opportunity to integrate themselves into the whole of student life.

Women's intramural football is off to a running start, with the Brutal Broads and the Rascals tied for first place with 2-0 records after two weeks of action.

Intramurals go 'Wild'; playoffs next week

The men's intramural football season was concluded this week, as the Wild Bunch beat the Syndicate 6-0, capturing the flag football championship. Next week will be a postseason playoff between the top four teams.

Before Tuesday's game both the Wild Bunch and the Syndicate had been undefeated. The only touchdown of the game was scored when Larry Cook caught a pass from Sam Gaddy. In the closing minutes the Syndicate nearly tied the game, but a long run was nullified by an illegal block penalty.

The Wild Bunch, the Syndicate the Brotherhood, and the Chosen Few will participate in next week's postseason playoffs. The first and third-place teams will play, with the winner to be challenged by the winner of the game between the second and

Titans attain 14-4 record

With the sweep of a double-header, the Oral Roberts University baseball team ended a successful fall schedule on a winning note.

The Titans had little difficulty in the opener, beating Oklahoma City Southwestern 14-5. Crossing the plate eight times, the ORU nine captured the closing game 8-3. The double victory gave the Titans a 14-4 record for the fall "practice" season.

"Now we pretty well know who is going to start in the spring," explained Coach Herb Dallis. "We use it (the fall season) to see how the new kids are going to help us and to give them a chance to play."

Tennis team makes sweep of ORU Fall Championships

by Dan Presley

Oral Roberts University proved to be the masters of their own ORU Fall Championship tennis tournament last weekend.

Peter Van Lingen won the singles title of the off-season affair for the Titans. He also joined teammate Erik Ulleberg to go all the way in the doubles division.

The Titans had the contest all sewn up before Ulleberg and Van Lingen ever touched the courts for finals play. ORU's Josef Solc was the other contestant in the tourney's singles finals. Solc and teammate Robyn Gool formed the other duo in the doubles finals.

"It's kind of anticlimactic when you have your own guys in the finals," observed Coach Bernis Duke. Smiling, he added, "I can't complain about that!"

Solc and Van Lingen advanced through the first four rounds into the semifinals. Ulleberg failed in his bid to join them, losing to second-seeded Lindsay Straney of Oklahoma City University.

OCU, one of the top tennis schools in the country, also sent two players into the semi-finals. In the first showdown, Solc pulled the upset over Straney, 6-4, 6-4.

Victories of 6-0 and 6-1 sent Van Lingen to the finals at the expense of Arturo Rojas.

With both Solc and Van Lingen contending for top honors, ORU had to win, barring collapse of the nets. After 6-0, 6-2 decisions, the singles title went to Van Lingen.

The Titans continued to show their muscle in the doubles action. Sets of 6-2, 6-2 over Bill Griffith and Dave Pinnel of TU in the fourth round placed Ulleberg and Van Lingen in the finals.

Straney and Arnold Short of OCU, seeded first in doubles, fell victim to Solc and Robyn Gool. The 6-4, 4-6, and 6-3 upset placed the Titans in the finals match against Ulleberg and Van Lingen. There the latter two prevailed after a 7-5, 5-7, 6-2 battle.

ORU will play next in a Tulsa Park Department-sponsored tournament Oct. 21-24 at Tracy Park.

Golfers place in big tourney

The Oral Roberts University golf team did well in the Tucker Invitational at Albuquerque, N. M., last week, placing 11th out of 23 major ranked teams in the nation. This contest was a preview of the Nationals that will be held in Miami, Fla., next June.

The Titan tee-men hit the greens well in the Invitational, but their putting was off. During the four-day tournament, Harold Fisher and Dave Barr were the most consistent on the first two days, with Ted Gellert and Barr leading ORU the last two days.

Coach Peace wants to break within the top 10 in the nation very shortly. Very confident of his players, he feels, "We could repeat the record we had last year, which was 18-3. We are pointing toward the Nationals in Miami next June."

The next match on the schedule for the ORU golfers will be Monday against Tulsa University at LaFortune Park at 1 p.m.

Injuries hamper booters in 7-1 loss at Hesston

With one of its star players, Alieu Fye, sidelined because of injuries, the Oral Roberts University soccer team lost a 7-1 match to Hesston College at Hesston, Kan., last Saturday. The Titans saw their season record slip to 2-3.

Plagued with injuries incurred during the Evangel game, ORU was never a serious threat, as it was hampered all night by a lack of speed and depth. In addition to the loss of Fye, Mitchell De-Zeeuw and Tim Hinkle were slowed down considerably by ankle injuries.

Hesston College, much improved over last year, was able to score its seven goals with ease. "Soccer is the big sport at Hesston and they should prove to be a power in coming years," reported Coach John B. Johnson. Only two seniors will graduate from this year's team.

The Titans got their only score on a penalty shot by Tim Hinkle.

ORU was scheduled to meet St. Benedict's College from Atchison, Kan., this past Wednesday in a home match. Saturday the Titans travel to Springfield, Mo., for a rematch with Evangel College. The next home game will be next Friday, Oct. 22, at 3 p.m. against North Texas State. The game will be played at Holland Hall School, located on 81st Street, between Yale and Sheridan.

The next intramural event for men is tennis, which will begin immediately after the football playoffs.

The women's intramural football season started later than the men's, and it will continue until Oct. 31.

After Tuesday's games the men's standings are as follows:

	Won	Lost
Wild Bunch	8	0
Syndicate	6	1
Brotherhood	6	1
Chosen Few	4	3
Hale's Angels	3	4
Lord's	3	5
Mandatory 8	2	6

After two weeks of play the standings for women's intramurals are:

Southern Comfort	2	1
Beta Phi Delta	1	1
Sampson's Sidekicks	1	1
