Day-long seminar convenes Oct. 30

by Barbara Miller

Innovative best describes the Communication Arts Seminar, "Answers Through Action," to be held Oct. 30. As an outgrowth of the department, it will run from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Zoppelt Auditorium.

The idea for a seminar developed last year when students'

Miss Kuhlman holds rally

Well-known radio and television personality Kathryn Kuhlman will speak before an anticipated capacity crowd of 9,000 in the Tulsa Assembly Center Arena this Sunday. Doors will open at noon and the meeting will begin as soon as the Center is filled around 1 p.m.

Over 400 ORU students will be involved in the choir or ushering for the Kuhlman event. Practice for choir members will be tonight at the First United Methodist Church at 11th and Boulder at 7 p.m.

Miss Kuhlman is the founder and president of the Kathryn Kuhlman Foundation which sponsors over 20 foreign missions. She is the author of two books, I Believe in Miracles and God Can Do It Again. More than 50 of her radio and television talks are on tape and her national programs are heard on Tulsa radio daily and on television on Sundays. Also accompanying her will be famed pianists Dino and Jimmy McDonald.

responses on the role of the Communications Department producing such statements as this: "In counseling, I just didn't get enough definite suggestions from anyone. This caused me to become frustrated. All my questions were turned back on me unanswered." To meet the need for more contact between the students and the department, therefore, the seminar was planned.

Emphasizing its personalized interest, Dr. Paul McClendon, department chairman, stated, "I want to see young people who graduate from this university make an impact upon this world for Jesus Christ. I don't see how this can be done without the range of communications. I'm not so interested in architectural pillars, buildings and such. I'm more interested in the living stones that Christ is building here."

Tom Ivy, seminar coordinator, feels that the day's sessions will accomplish several objectives. "It gives the Communication Arts Department a strong, full departmental presentation to the university of the goals, purposes, and potentials for the student, and provides an excellent setting for bringing majors and minors together under an academic-occupational theme. The seminar also opens a wide door for student-faculty interaction and offers basic information and guidance in course sequencing and scheduling."

The seminar schedule includes sessions allowing a professor from each field of communications to relate the course of study to a liberal arts framework, point out occupational prospects, and present a spiritual challenge for the utilization of media tools. One session, the first multimedia presentation on campus, will utilize three slide projectors, twelve film clips, a fifteen voice narration, split stereo sound, three screens, and live drama. After a lunch break, field workshops will encourage student questions on various fields. Dinner will be followed by a program with a guest speaker and a Communion service.

Communications majors and minors will receive official invitations, and others interested in the seminar are welcome to attend. According to Ivy, "Perhaps the most important factor of this seminar will be a link—a link established between the department of Communication Arts, the professor, and the student."

President outlines economic plan

President Nixon last week outlined a two-year, $100-million plan to combat the "enormous economic inequities" which he said confront minority businessmen.

Nixon said his budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1972, would call for spending $63.6 million on technical assistance and management services through the Office of Minority Business Enterprise.

KSU prexy asks for grand jury

President Glenn A. Olds of Kent State University said this week he will deliver a petition to the White House next week, calling for a grand jury investigation into the killings of four Kent students last year. The Justice Department previously has declined to convene a grand jury investigation into the deaths.

The world of sports witnessed the return of the Pittsburgh Pirates to the status of world baseball champions this week as they beat the Baltimore Orioles, 2-1, in the seventh game of the World Series.

Interim Session meets on campus

Tomorrow at 10 a.m. the October Interim Session of the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Legislature (OIL) will convene in Zoppelt Auditorium. The purpose of this session is to iron out the details for the fall Legislative Session, Nov. 11-14, in Oklahoma City.

President Oral Roberts will address the meeting at 11:30 a.m. He will talk about Oral Roberts University and how it came into being.

Approximately 35 delegates will attend the Interim Session. These delegates are Oklahoma universities' student leaders. Brian Stalwick, ORU's delegation chairman, Neil Clapp, and Rod Jacobson will represent ORU at this Saturday's session which will last until 3 p.m. ORU students are welcome at the meetings and interaction is encouraged.

Stalwick, Clapp, and Randy Nolan attended last month's Interim Session. Discussion covered several topics, including voter registration, this month's Interim Session, and the coming fall Legislative Session.

Referring to the fall Legislative Session, Stalwick commented, "Many students have indicated an interest in OIL, but haven't yet asked for something to do. We need people who are both interested and willing to work. Presently, we are working on legislation concerning labor courts. We need help in research and in the actual drawing up of the legislation if we are to be prepared to actively participate in this session."

Stalwick continued, "OIL is a two-way process for college students. On one hand, the delegates offer substantive, legislative proposals. Exchanging these proposals in the process of discussion and debate, these same students receive valuable experience in government and how the legislative process works in practice."

In recognition of its value as both a practical and an educational organization, OIL has the support of Governor David Hall, Lt. Governor George Nigh, and the Oklahoma State Legislature.

Students who are interested in OIL and who are willing to work can contact Stalwick at extension 2888.

Exam scheduled

The Placement Service Office, Room 309 LRC, has received application forms for the Federal Service Entrance Examination. This examination is given to those desiring management trainee positions in the federal government. The applicant must be receiving their bachelor's degree this coming spring to be eligible. The examination is given the third Saturday of each month.

Students donate blood

Today a man is having heart surgery; tomorrow a child will be hurt in a car wreck. ORU students may have helped to save these and many other people in the Tulsa area by giving blood on Red Cross Donor Day last Friday, Oct. 15, when 137 students donated a pint of blood, surpassing the goal of 125 pints by 12. This showed a 64 percent increase over last year's donation.

Each blood donor is given a card by the Red Cross. Every time he gives a pint of blood his card is dated. After giving eight pints, he receives a gold pin from the Red Cross.

The Rev. Rex Humbard, pastor and founder of the Cathedral of Tomorrow, addressed the Oral Roberts University student body in Chapel last Wednesday, speaking on his Cathedral and television ministries.

Reaching out in love . . .

Students 'fill the gap' at Recreation Center

"When we get to the Center we become their hands, feet, eyes and ears. We do what they can't do and help them with what they can do; we fill the gap," commented Mike Ash, leader of this ministry to the physically limited.

Just what is "the Center?" It is the Tulsa Recreation Center for the Physically Limited. Its purpose is to provide recreation, fun, and laughter for the handicapped people of the Tulsa area. It's like a YMCA for the physically limited.

The handicapped members of the Center are divided into three different groups. The adults come to the Center for crafts, organizational meetings, games, and special programs. The teens take part in the crafts and organizational meetings as well as hockey games and bowling. And the children participate in swimming, crafts, baseball games, picnics, bowling, and carnivals.

Volunteers from Tulsa and Oral Roberts University go out to the Center and work with these physically limited people. Crafts are a big part of the Recreation Center's program. The volunteers help the members to make ceramics and felt items for their own personal use or to be sold in the Center's Gift Shop for the benefit of the Center. The proceeds help pay for more supplies.

"The Tulsa Recreation Center for the Physically Handicapped was started by a group of Jewish women, solely supported by donations. It is now supported by state funds, donations, and the Gift Shop," Mike reported.

When asked about the members' reaction to the ORU students going out to the Center, Mike answered, "Their reaction is one of love and appreciation for the work that the ORU students do when they come to the Center. The students are greatly missed when they are not present. The love that the students show to the members is multiplied a hundredfold."

"The reason I go to the Center," continued Mike, "is that I need an outlet or an outreach. It uplifts me and fills me with compassion."

ORU students go to the Recreation Center on Friday nights to work with the adults and on Saturday mornings to work with the children.

Jean Lord presents senior viola recital next Saturday

Jean Lord, viola student of Francis Jones, will present her senior recital Saturday, Oct. 30, at 8 p.m.

Jean, who played with the Tulsa Symphony last year, was assistant principal of the viola section and had the responsibility of assuming leadership if the section leader was gone. She is not playing with the Symphony this year because she is carrying an overload of hours in order to graduate.

Jean began playing the violin when she was in the 5th grade. Between her high school and college years she switched to the viola because violas are needed in most orchestras.

Since a viola usually doesn't play a very interesting line, especially in simple music, many violists quit. But not Jean. She is working toward her Bachelor of Music Education and hopes some day to conduct a high school orchestra.

neer in Tulsa, and his family.

Jean's home is in Arkansas City, Kan. Before coming to ORU she attended Southwestern College in Winfield, Kan.

Included in the recital program are Concerto in B minor by Handel-Casadesus, Sicilienne by Faure', Apres Un Reve by Faure', and Ciaccona by Vitali.

Senate Soundings

Solons' duties clarified

ASB President Rod Jacobsen opened Tuesday's Senate meeting by clarifying the responsibilities of Senate members. "You represent the students," he said, "and this means more than just coming to Senate meetings and voting for or against the resolutions that are presented. It means talking to those around you. Find out what the students want."

The importance of Jacobsen's advice cannot be stressed too much. Senate members must remember that as long as the student government remains in its present form, they are representing a body of students. They are not representing only their own opinions or only their friends' opinions. It is necessary that they be in tune with the views of at least their own class.

However, it is difficult for the class officers to know exactly what every other student in the class feels about a particular issue or proposal. Each student should realize that unless he takes the time to talk to his class officers, there is little chance that his opinion will be represented or even considered.

The responsibility for communication and accurate representation is shared equally by Senate members and the student body. Complete representation of all student opinions will probably never be possible, but greater representation than what is now experienced is possible and can be achieved. It must be achieved if student government at ORU is to be effective.

COMMENTARY

Will Church awake to total calling?

by Paul A. Honess

Any excess in action or theology produces an equal and opposite excess reaction or counter-theology. The theology of the "Subcultural Fundamental Bag," which is exclusively a "Salvation Theology," states that the ills of society will be changed as the members of the society change. In and of itself this is not false at all. But when the leaders of individual churches and the members of these churches participate in an exclusive "Salvation Theology," it becomes the sole purpose of that church to get people "saved." Pentecostal Movements (that are in Subcultural Pentecostal Bags) add to this and say that the sole purpose of the Church is to get people "saved" and "filled with the Spirit." I consider both as "Salvation Theologies." It seems to me a "Salvation Theology" is a shallow theology.

The two "subcultures" cause the reaction of many "liberals" to seek the abolishment of social injustice, political corruption, and loose morals by a nonspiritual route. They seek "meaningful dialogue" and sensitivity groups to accomplish what only an encounter with Jesus can do. They drop a "born-again" and/or a "Spirit-filled" experience out of their theology and therefore miss out on the power to live life. They miss out on the very essence of life: the daily walk with Jesus Christ, Who offers forgiveness, joy, justice, and love.

We, therefore, have two extremes: the "Subcultural Fundamental—Pentecostal Bags" and the intellectual jargon of the liberal camps. At least, both are "reaction-type" theologies; at worst, heresy; and in either case, sadly missing the boat. If the Church concerns itself with the exclusive activity of soul saving, the prophetic ministry will suffer loss and be taken up by the secular world.

Here is what I mean. The fundamental, Bible-believing, born-again church of the deep South is still the main seat of segregation. She is behind the government, school systems, employment in corporations, and even housing programs in actively seeking equality for mankind. Christians are at least 110 years, not 195 years, late in proclaiming to Americans that no man is not made in the image and likeness of God. And, that no human being or race of human beings shall be treated as scum with the approval of the only just God. Christians should be for this type of action, not because of the Constitution or the Declaration of Independence, but because God—"the God Who is there"—has spoken to us, saying that this is the way He wants men to live. Jeremiah, Hosea, and Amos, in this light, are the champions of civil rights.

What rules our values and theology? Do the subcultures of our ministers control them or do they walk and minister in Truth? Cultures are relative but Truth is solid rock on which the wise stand. Are we of the Church concerned with the Truth or opinion? Are we concerned with being "all things to all men" in order to be able to smile and not rock anyone's boat? Can Christianity be love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control and not make waves?

One of the most solid aspects of "Fundamental Christianity" is the emphasis on the propositional, verbalized revelation of God in the Scriptures. God has spoken through the prophets, in Jesus, and throughout recent history, in the Church. The Scriptures are packed with Truth to which this world needs and desires to hear and to react. These Truths are not culturally fixed but transcultural and beautiful.

Until the Church wakes up to her total calling (Luke 4:18, 19), she will be led by those who have that form of religion but deny the total power of it, and there will be a loss of orthodox truth, true spirituality, and beauty. Sadly enough, the one-eyed man will continue to be the king of the blind.

The folly of the quitter's life

When things go wrong, as They sometimes will;
When the road you're trudging
Seems all uphill;
When the funds are low
And the debts are high
And you want to smile,
But you have to sigh;
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest! if you must—but never quit.
Life is queer, with its twists and turns,
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won, if he'd stuck it out;
Stick to your task, though the pace seems slow—
You may succeed with one more blow.
Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt—
And you never can tell how close you are,
It may be near, when it seem afar.
So stick to the fight, When you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worse that you mustn't quit.
—Anonymous

It is common to think that the easiest way out of a difficult situation is to quit, to say, "I can't do it." This seems to be especially true during the "Midsemester Slump." There are just too many things to do. Tests and papers threaten your sanity as you watch the clock strike 3 a.m. You wonder if it is really worth the trouble.

Wouldn't it be much easier to quit? But quitting doesn't solve problems. It merely postpones them. There is an old adage that "Quitters never win and winners never quit."

The Apostle Paul didn't quit even though he encountered many rough times, shipwrecks, imprisonment, physical afflictions. Instead he says, "but one thing I do, forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead, I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3:13b-14).

We, too, should be striving for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus. Then our studies and other activities will become relevant. We will find the joy of accomplishment as we press on. So no matter how dark the way ahead of you as you press on. . . . Don't Quit!

Senior questions choice

Dear Editor:

I was recently disturbed by the manner in which the commencement speaker for the 1972 senior class was chosen. It was the understanding of the seniors that the choice of both the commencement and baccalaureate speakers was theirs. A poll of the seniors showed they preferred Senator Mark Hatfield. Apparently, the Administration had already taken the liberty to invite Mr. Carl Albert, the Speaker of the House. Although Mr. Albert's name was suggested to the class before the poll was taken, his name did not make a significant showing. Nevertheless, this past week I learned that Mr. Albert had accepted an invitation to be our commencement speaker.

The reactions I got when I told fellow seniors of the matter ranged from outrage to resignation. Though those responsible for obtaining Mr. Albert have secured a very prominent speaker, the manner in which they ran roughshod over the freedom of the seniors to choose their own speaker is disheartening, to say the least, for it evidences a lack of respect for both our wishes and our ability to make responsible decisions.

Cagers hope to enter prestigious MVC circuit

The annual press day at Oral Roberts University could have been compared with any other until Coach Ken Trickey released some of the future plans for his Titan basketball team. In an article carried in the Tulsa newspaper, Coach Trickey announced, "We are interested in making a formal application to the Missouri Valley (Conference) for membership."

The article indicated that the MVC plans to expand with the addition of two new members in the near future. Coach Trickey told the press, "I think that our basketball program is at the stage to play at that level (in reference to the MVC). I'm not saying we would go into the Valley and dominate the thing, but I think we could compete."

In order even to be eligible for membership in the MVC, three major events had to take place since the end of the 1970-71 school year: the school's full accreditation by the North Central Association, the entering into competition with major colleges as witnessed by the 1971-72 basketball schedule, and the school's acceptance as a full active member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA).

The idea for membership is a new idea, according to Coach Trickey. He went on to tell the press at the meeting, "I want to stress that this is still in the planning stages. We're not even sure how to go about it. But we're hopeful of working it out." One of the big plus factors of joining the MVC would be the scheduling of games during the months that most teams are playing their conference schedules.

Once ORU received its accreditation, the future plans for its athletic program were given a major boost. The accreditation enabled ORU to apply and get full membership in the NCAA which now qualifies ORU for postseason play in the NIT or NCAA tournaments.

The lack of postseason play and accreditation kept many prospects from considering ORU. With the added lure of postseason play and the possibility of membership in the MVC, ORU's recruiting program is expected to take an even brighter look.

Intramural table tennis to commence

The men's intramural sports program will tentatively resume next week with the beginning of the tennis and table tennis tournaments. Meanwhile girl's flag football continues until Oct. 31.

The tennis and table tennis intramurals will occur simultaneously and each team may enter as many contestants as are interested. Team points will be awarded not only for finalists, but also for each individual match won.

Following the tennis and table tennis tournaments this semester will be competition in badminton and swimming. Entries for badminton will open Nov. 1 and play will begin Nov. 8. Entries will open for swimming Nov. 10, and competition will begin Nov. 17.

Currently the Brutal Broads are leading the girls' flag football standings with a 3-0 record. Following the Brutal Broads are Southern Comfort, 3-1, and the Rascals, 2-1.

According to Jack Wallace, the men's intramural director, it was decided not to have the flag football playoffs originally scheduled for this week, because there was no tie for first place.

Before he was injured . . . Alieu Fye shows form that made him a key player on the Titan soccer squad. The loss of Fye, as well as injuries to Mitch DeZeeuw and Tim Tabor, has hampered ORU in its last three outings.

Booters to face North Texas; attempt to even record

The Oral Roberts University soccer team has a 3-4 record, after two recent losses.

Oct. 13 saw ORU lose to St.

HPE Club forms

A meeting of HPE majors and minors who wish to join the ORU HPE Club will be held Oct. 29 at 7 p.m. The meeting was formerly scheduled for Oct. 26.

The club's purpose is to unite HPE majors and minors and keep them up-to-date on their field of study. The club will also be sponsoring various activities related to the field of HPE, according to Tim Cameron, club president.

The meeting will be held in a Halloween setting in the Titan room of the HRC. There will be entertainment and refreshments. Officers in addition to Cameron are: Greg Davis, vice-president, Debbie Davison, secretary-treasurer, and Linda Mix, social chairman.

Benedict's College. It was a bad day all around for ORU as they lost 10-0 without their key player, Alieu Fye.

There have been many injuries among Coach Johnson's players, one more of whom was Mitchell DeZeeuw who didn't play against Evangel when the ORU soccer team lost a 4-0 match last Saturday. In that game, goalie Tim Tabor also received an injury but played a fine game in spite of it.

Commenting on the St. Benedict win Coach Johnson said "We didn't play that badly; St. Benedict's was just that good. They are excellent." Coach Johnson also said that "with a week to rest up we should have some of the injuries out of the way."

The soccer team plays today at 3 p.m. on the Holland Hall field against North Texas State University, a team they beat on their own field earlier this year.
