Stalwick chairs ORU delegation

OIL fall session convenes

by Cindy Davis

The 1971 fall session of the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Legislature (OIL) convened yesterday in the House and Senate chambers of the state legislature in Oklahoma City.

Representing ORU at the legislative session are Brian Stalwick, delegation chairman and senator; Chris Busch, senator; Cindy Davis, representative; and Linda Salisbury, representative. These students may serve on several committees including Governmental Affairs, Constitutional Revisions and Regulatory Services, Appropriations and Budget, Roads and Highways, Public Affairs and Public Health, and Revenue and Taxation.

Scheduled speakers include Governor David Hall, Lt. Governor George Nigh and State Senator Inhof.

The ORU delegation plans to present a bill, authored by Stalwick, concerning labor courts. According to Stalwick, the Labor Courts Act of 1971 "will do away with strikes and lockouts.

It provides for the establishment of labor courts with the power of binding and compulsory arbitration. The courts would be administered by the Federal Mediation and Arbitration Service. Management and the labor organization would both agree on three arbitrators to serve on the court.

"Action of this sort is necessary because excessive wage and price hikes add to the inflation spiral. Unemployment increases, because as wages go up, employers seek to automate their industries.

"There's no reason why labor and management can't agree on a contract by collective bargaining, but when that process breaks down another alternative is needed to keep the economy stable. In 1970, the United Auto Workers strike lasted 82 days and cost the economy $4 billion. An eight week General Electric strike lost $150 million in wages for union members. Last year alone, 66.4 million man days of work were lost in work-stoppage or strikes.

"Although this bill is more natural in scope, I expect it to be one of the major bills of this session. In effect, it is an attempt to establish a basis for collective bargaining and to protect the economy from recession."

Last month, the OIL October Interim Session met on the ORU campus. President Oral Roberts spoke to the group of 35 delegates from 10 Oklahoma colleges and universities. The delegates discussed House and Senate rules which are in effect at this fall session.

The OIL was created as a student legislative body patterned after the Oklahoma Legislature. It is a unified body of more than 26 colleges and universities, affording students a means of communicating their ideas about specific issues and political questions to those in public office who wish to receive such ideas.

Clapp and advisor George Gillen will perform the ceremony of accepting the pledges into the club. Master of Ceremonies, Brian Stalwick, will introduce the main speaker after entertainment provided by DeAnza Brock and Cathy Cornell. Circle K advisor Dr. Grady Walker will give the invocation.

All business majors and minors and Circle K members are invited to attend the meeting in the south pie of the cafeteria from 5:15 to 6:30 p.m.

Library sponsors book sale

Beginning today the library will have a book sale. Book trucks will be located on the 4th floor of the LRC. Prices are marked on the first page of each book. Included in the sale are two sets of Britannica Encyclopedias, available for bids. Books must be purchased at the Circulation Desk.

Life in the Spirit Seminar

For the second time this semester, a Life in the Spirit Seminar will be offered to students. This discipleship training course is designed for new Christians and covers the basic Christian teachings.

The series will begin this Sunday evening, Nov. 14, from 6 to 7 p.m. in rooms 207A & B in the cafeteria. Professor Paul Inbody will conduct the sessions, teaching from his own book, Walking in the Spirit. He will be distributing these Bible study guides during the first session. The weekly classes will continue for four or five weeks.

In encouraging participation of interested students campus Pastor Bob Stamps suggested, "This seminar might be helpful to even some of the older Christians."

Primrose earns Ph.D. degree

Robert A. Primrose, Chairman of the Communication Arts Department, received last Thursday his Ph.D. degree from the University of Iowa, Iowa City. He is the second ORU professor to earn the high award in the last month, following English professor Grady Walker, who completed his degree requirements Oct. 19.

Before coming to ORU Primrose taught two years at Bible Standard College, served as Registrar and Dean of Education for six years at Open Bible College, and taught Speech and Rhetoric at the U. of Iowa for two years.

In the fall of 1969 Primrose joined the Communication Arts Department of Oral Roberts University as Assistant Professor in Public Address, having already completed his BA degree at Greenville College and his MA at the University of Oregon.

Last year Primrose began development of the forensics program. His doctoral thesis involved research on the attitudes of ministers concerning varied topics of social, ethnic, and economic concerns in the pulpit.

Primrose resides in Tulsa with his wife, Barbara and his three children Tamra, Heather, and Robin.

U.S. sets off blasts in Alaska

The United States Saturday shot off a five-megaton underground blast, causing the largest earth tremor ever produced by man; rocking the island of Amchitka (Alaska) like a major earthquake, it carved out a large chamber in the earth beneath it. The blast was considered successful and exploded exactly as planned.

The blast came five hours after the U.S. Supreme Court, in an extraordinary Saturday session, refused by one vote to delay the test for further consideration of allegations that it might cause catastrophic damage.

House rejects prayer amendment

The House of Representatives Monday failed to pass by a two-thirds majority a constitutional amendment to permit prayer in public schools. The proposed amendment read: "Nothing contained in the Constitution shall abridge the right of persons lawfully assembled, in any public building which is supported in whole or in part through the expenditure of public funds, to participate in voluntary prayer or meditation."

The proposal vote of 240-162 was 28 votes short of the two-thirds needed for a Constitutional amendment.

Nixon board limits pay raises

President Nixon's Pay Board ruled Monday that pay raises granted after the wage freeze expires at 12:01 a.m. next Sunday may not exceed 5.5 per cent a year.

The Board also ruled that existing contracts may go into effect after the freeze so long as they are consistent with the 5.5 rule.

Furthermore, the Board overruled organized labor's key demand for back payment of raises lost during the freeze. It ruled that retroactive payment would be made only in a limited number of specifically approved cases.

Band presents concert Nov. 20

"The band has grown musically in quality, not just in quantity. The repertoire we are playing this year is entirely different," declares Bill Shellenbarger, ORU concert band and jazz ensemble director. He will present these two groups in concert Saturday, Nov. 20, at 8 p.m. in the Timko-Barton lobby.

A varied program, including classical, modern, and jazz music, will be offered. The concert band will perform "William Tell Overture" by Rossini, "Caucasian Pas-sacaglia" by Nelhybel, "West Point Symphony" by Dvorak, "Mr. Lucky" by Mancini, "Scenes from the Louvre" by Joio, "Superstar" by Webber, and "The Standard of St. George" by Alford. Verl Pharis, guest conductor from the Union School District, will conduct a Sousa march, "The Thunderer."

The Titan Jazz Ensemble will present "Psychodelphia," "Red Buttermilk," and the "59th Street Bridge Song" (Feelin' Groovy), featuring DeAnza Brock as vocal soloist. A dueling of the drums between 'Da Woodrow' Ray and 'Wee Willy' Kunze and "Solid Soul," featuring Don Eland, Danny Farmer, and Loren Stephenson, will conclude the program.

The size of the concert band has increased 50 per cent since last year. Forty-eight per cent of this year's 90-member band is new blood, freshmen and transfer students. Shellenbarger recalled "The first year I was here, there were 30 people in the band, and I utilized the drum section from Memorial High School."

"The jazz ensemble was organized last semester, strictly for fun and games," remarked Shellenbarger. "It is now a vital part of the music program. It affords the student opportunity to listen and add to his own knowledge overall ability broadened by this experience." Twenty-four students comprise this group.

"I'm very pleased with the response and attitudes of our instrumental people," Shellenbarger concluded. "Our musicians are sought after by the Tulsa Opera, Tulsa Philharmonic Orchestra, and area churches."

Dating service offered

An all-school computer dating service will be sponsored by the freshman class for the first home Titan basketball game Dec. 3, against California State Poly. For fifty cents a student will be assured of a date for the bonfire, the basketball game, and admittance to special entertainment in a coffeehouse which will be set up in the sub.

COMMENTARY

Cultural Affairs very much alive

by Paul Palmer

The Concert and Lecture Committee at Oral Roberts University is dead. Now, before any of the ORU campus agitators get up in arms and wonder what happened to their $4,525.65, I'll explain. It was reported in last week's Oracle that the CLC had changed names. This is true. The new name is the Cultural Affairs Committee of Oral Roberts University. Besides having a new name, this committee has established new goals and is implementing a new type of program.

Before going any further, I would like to recognize the other members of the committee: Jan Dargatz, Tim Wilkins, Jim Kirby, and Jan Terry, secretary. Faculty members on the committee include Raymond Lewandowski and Tony Catanzariti.

The committee has set a major goal to attain during 1971-72—to have a beneficial series of concerts and lectures on the campus. After setting a goal we have done many things to try to attain this goal.

The first item of business after getting organized was to set up a filing system on a number of different agencies, so that we as a committee would have a varied list of attractions from which to choose. This being done we started screening through the myriad of speakers and artists. We created what we thought was a fairly well-balanced program. Unfortunately it cannot be disclosed because it has not received final approval from President Roberts. This approval should come within a week.

The second action the committee took was to join the National Entertainment Conference. The seventy-five dollars that was spent to join the NEC, in my opinion, was very wisely spent.

Cultural Affairs has also taken the same step that the Drama and Music Departments have taken. We have made application to become associate members in the Arts Council of Tulsa. We now await word from their executive council as to whether we will be allowed to join.

The final step in putting the whole program together will be accomplished when we get final approval from President Roberts. Cultural Affairs will print a high-quality brochure describing the attractions in its program. This will be ready for distribution at the outset of the spring semester. This will also be distributed in the Tulsa community to promote the program and cultural image of ORU.

Starting next year there will be attractions throughout the year. Since the committee chairman and members will be appointed early in the spring, they will be able to plan a well-rounded program and have a brochure printed during the summer. The committee hopes that the program we have planned for the spring will make up for the lack of a program this fall. If at any time, any student has an idea, please feel free to contact any of the committee members. We are open to ideas from all facets of the ORU family. In actuality the Concert and Lecture Committee is dead, but, Cultural Affairs is very much alive.

Shaw presents vocal recital

"I'm excited about performing here, but a person's first recital in a new place is always the hardest," said Lucretia Shaw, assistant professor of music at ORU, concerning her upcoming voice recital to be held in Timko-Barton Recital Hall Monday, Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. The soprano recital will be accompanied by Jane Pummill on the piano, and Gene Eland, Chairman of the Fine Arts Department on the clarinet.

Featured on the program will be "Three Vocalises for Soprano and Clarinet" by Vaughan Williams. "Some of the selections have never been performed by me before, and others are favorites I've gleaned from past experiences," Miss Shaw said.

Obtaining her Master of Music Education from North Texas State University in 1967, Miss Shaw continued her studies at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester N. Y.

"I've taught previously in a church-related college; therefore a spiritual atmosphere is not new. But it seemed difficult in the other schools for the academics to receive the proper perspective," she said.

Commenting on the requirements for voice majors at ORU, Miss Shaw explained that "... all must learn to perform and have a representative knowledge of French, German and Italian, as well as English. Voice majors perform semesterly for the music department as a whole and bi-monthly for the voice department. In addition to these, they must hold a junior and senior recital."

Valedictorian of Oklahoma Eastern State College in 1961, Miss Shaw has studied privately under Irene Jordan and Julius Huen. She is most recently acclaimed for her performance in Puccini's La Boheme, Faust, and Gianni Schicchi in production with the University of Southern Mississippi Opera Company.

Swampstompers remove garbage

D. J. Markley, president of the Swampstompers, the ORU ecology club, reports that his club has removed over 175 pounds of litter from the grounds of ORU. The club is currently planning a feasible recycling program to convert the school's trash into reusable products. Local companies are aiding the stompers in their bid for a clean environment by agreeing to buy materials such as aluminum, paper, and glass.

Is China open to Christianity?

The Nixon visit to China has already opened the doors and windows to a variety of U.S. visitors and delegations. Ping-pong players, journalists, and scientists have been high on the welcome list in Peking. However, church leaders have not been on the junket tour, although many are eager to return to the mainland and see how things are after 25 years of repression.

Christianity has taken some terrible blows in China for more than 25 years. We forget that the first Christians were known in Asia as early as the 13th century. Catholics alone operated more than 300 hospitals, 400 orphanages, and 20,000 schools. By the early 1940's there were 3,000 foreign priests and easily 2,000 Chinese priests as well as a number of bishops.

Protestants, by 1935, had a following of more than a million members (Catholics, at that time, numbered beyond three million) with powerful representation all across China in the Red Cross, YMCA, and YWCA. They had, by 1940, established 15 major colleges and universities.

Since 1949 the thoughts of Chairman Mao have been anti-religious. The Christian community took the brunt of his attack, though Buddhism, Confucianism, and Taoism were also put down. The religious fervor of the Red Guards and their testament quoting of Mao has indicated that faith has not been lost, only directed to Marxist humanism.

However, the situation in North Vietnam has been quite different from China—something most Americans cannot grasp. The Christian community in Hanoi, primarily Roman Catholic, did not entirely flee to South Vietnam. Nor have the followers of Ho Chi Minh been completely against religion. Coexistence seems to be the stance and most resident Christians in the north have given heavy support to the administration and its conflict.

Last May, the National Liaison Committee of Vietnamese Patriotic and Peace Loving Catholics held a major conference in Hanoi to endorse the war effort and to link the program of Ho Chi Minh and Jesus Christ. According to this group of Christians, if they are to fulfill their obligations to God and the fatherland, the Vietnamese Catholics must "be one with the nation, unite with the entire people in the resistance to U. S. aggression, and pray for national salvation, in strict implementation of President Ho Chi Minh and Christ's recommendations."

Perhaps with the U.S. move toward more casual relations with Red China the door will reopen to Christianity in the entire Far East. One fourth of the total world population lives there! Regardless of the nation's leaders, God loves the people and died for all. The remnants of Christianity remain a shadow in China and a distortion in the Vietnams. Both desperately need our prayers.

Play review

Performance delights 'Rainmaker' audience

by Larry Peers

Comedy lightened the hearts of the audience of "The Rainmaker" during the productions November 4-6 at Timko-Barton Auditorium.

Amidst the laughter of the audience was a deep appreciation for the talent displayed on the stage. First, the set well expressed the mood of the play. It prepared the audience for a frank and humorous production, void of too much elaboration. The absence of walls demonstrated the unity of all the scenes in the play.

Furthermore, the cast utilized this acting environment to present an amusing panorama of the Curry family in the mid-1920's. Included in the cast were Eugene Lynn, Gabriel Hegyes, Norm Allen, Joni Hall, David Smith, Clay Howell, and Phil Boatwright. Each made his contribution to the play, finely directed by Alma Golder for her senior project.

Much of the laughter was due to Norm Allen's lively handling of Jim Curry, the carefree adolescent.

The turning point occurs when a self-proclaimed rainmaker, Phil Boatwright, declares that he can bring rain to the Curry's drought ridden ranch. Phil, perhaps, convinced the audience of his ability, too.

Also mystified by the Rainmaker was Lizzie Curry, the spinster daughter. Joni Hall made her debut in the only female role. Her presentation was quite effective and should mean more acting for Joni in the future.

Lizzie personified a plain woman, yet a woman who wanted to just be herself. She refused to play roles to attract suitors. Being herself, however, brought discomfort to the rest of the family, who was concerned that she might become an old maid.

Admittedly, with the help of the Rainmaker, she did for the moment transcend the real Lizzie. But this was a fake Lizzie, created in the image of the Rainmaker; the fantasy soon disappeared. At the end, when the rain finally falls, the audience is aware that the Rainmaker can make rain, but Lizzie had to make herself.

Senate Soundings

LRC phones are proposed

Student Senate passed two resolutions in last Tuesday's session. The LRC Telephone Resolution, authored by Karen Meyers, senior class treasurer, and Sheryl Williams, ASB secretary, asks that the "Administration consider the possibility of placing campus phones for student usage in the first and second floors of the LRC." This resolution recognizes that students, especially commuters, many times need to make campus phone calls and no campus phones are available for this purpose. A phone would also be invaluable in case a student was locked in the LRC at night.

Rod Jacobsen, ASB president, authored the Student Activities Center Clock Resolution. It calls for the Student Affairs Staff "to place a clock, both in the cafeteria and the student union."

The expected Commuter Committee report was postponed until next week's session on recommendation from Vickie Smith, co-chairman of the committee. The committee plans to meet during the week to finalize its proposals.

ORU reader questions Oracle role

Dear Editor,

A student newspaper should be the voice of the people, written by the students and to the students. I do not feel that the Oracle is the voice of the people. True, the paper needs to communicate to the students the campus news and announcements as its primary concern, but it need not be confined to just this campus. News about what's going on in the world and even in our own country usually reaches us by word of mouth (unless one is fortunate to own a radio or a TV), usually days after important events have happened.

The campus newspaper could be quite informative in recalling major issues in the world each week, going into detail with perhaps a whole page for off-campus news. And maybe one page could be reserved for the spiritual life news, including information about the chapels and the campus ministries; as well as a page for student commentaries, where students could express their opinions (without anything being cut) about important issues either concerning this campus or not.

I think there would be a lot more interest in the Oracle on behalf of the students if they themselves had a little more involvement in the paper, rather than just the staff. Our paper has a lot of potential if we could just expand it—both in length and in its scope of coverage.

A Concerned Student,
DLN

EDITOR'S NOTE—More off-campus news is not presently being printed because as a weekly student newspaper, we feel we should give priority to news of the university community and are unable in four or six pages to give adequate coverage to both school and off-campus news. We have initiated a brief summary of major news events and may from time to time publish larger items of more national and international interest. The latter items will only become reality, however, as more students indicate an interest in this type of material and the paper grows to become a larger production. This will also be crucial in giving more space for campus ministries and commentaries. All campus commentaries or letters to the editor are subject to editing or exclusion according to the criteria established in the editorial policy of this publication, as filed with the Student Senate Publications Committee. Names must be signed, although they will be withheld upon request.

Ministry for ill

"The Sick Corps," a new campus ministry organized to pray for and give fellowship to students who are ill, is available to all students.

Anyone who is ill and desires prayer is asked to call Judy Baxter at extension 2263 or Jon Lindvall at 2383.

Improving intramurals unite women gridders

by Thom Clark

In an age of supposed apathy, enthusiasm is alive and well in the women's intramural program at Oral Roberts University. According to Mary Smith, student director of women's intramural sports, the football program has been a success. "Actually, I'm quite happy about the enthusiasm shown by the girls this year," she said.

In referring to what the program has done for the women, Mary said, "It has united the girls. That's especially good for the freshmen girls." She explained that many of the underclass women have a feeling of being left out when they are away from home.

An attitude change has occurred this year which, according to Mary, has put more fun into the game. "This year they are playing more for the fun in it, and after all, that's what it's all about." No major injuries have occurred this year in the women's program which is "the result of the change in attitude." She explained that there is "less of the 'We have to win' type of feeling."

A majority of the players in the program are freshmen and sophomores. "Many of the juniors and seniors drop out of the intramural program once they get into their majors. This is due mostly to the resulting tight schedules," commented Mary.

A new twist was seen in the powder-puff style football game this year, with the addition of rules prohibiting kicking and blocking and a rule that calls for a dead ball on a fumble. Miss Smith indicated that the girls had a hard time getting used to the new style of play, noting that the new type of football "requires more skill than the old style of playing flag football. The game is not perfect yet, but it's getting better."

Mary pointed out that the overall program has come a long way, and added, "I would really like to see the intramural program for girls improve. This year is a step in the right direction. The program is now being run more parallel to the men's program."

Titans take official steps to join MVC

Oral Roberts University has made formal application to the Missouri Valley Conference, announced athletic director and basketball coach Ken Trickey last Thursday night. The conference faculty representatives are meeting this weekend in Dallas, but the decision concerning ORU's acceptance will not be made for some time.

Coach Trickey said that ORU has already completed most of the steps necessary in applying to the prestigious conference. Many people regard the Missouri Valley as the best overall basketball conference in the country.

A group has contacted ORU about the possible formation of a Southwest Area conference. The schools that have expressed interest in such a conference are Pan American, Hardin-Simmons, Houston Baptist, Loyola of New Orleans, and Centenary.

"We believe we have a good chance of entering the (Missouri Valley) conference," offered Trickey. "But if we are turned down," he continued, "we will make application elsewhere."

Trickey also told of plans to locally televise ORU's Dec. 9 game in Madison Square Garden against Hofstra, and added that two or three other ORU road games may be televised.
