Kandy Wallis and Jim Moore are shown in costume for their roles as Cinderella and The Prince in the production "Cinderella." There will be two performances of the play on Saturday, December 2 in McAbee Center at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults and $0.50 for children. ORU students may attend the dress rehearsal Friday evening without use of activity tickets and change. Jody Ridouer is directing the play as her senior project.

On Dial Access

KORU extends to weekends

by Ruth Figi

Turn your radio on. Well, not exactly. Sit down at a carrel and dial it in on the system, because "Weekend KORU" has hit campus.

"You're familiar with 'Lunch Bunch' and the Top 40 and Main Street News," said Don Goff, Blair Caver, Chinty Reinh, Tim Brunnitt, Brant Chaney, Rosemary Bowden, Nancy Albein, Larry Baker, Eldon Lawyer, Roddy Cerullo, and Susan Eckridge.

Junior included are Linda Salsbury, Deene Steere, Joyce Sumner, DeLoss Sudler, Charlette Hall, and Leslie Roche.

The students were selected according to scholarship, service to the university, participation and leadership in Student Senate activities, citizenship, and "best explanation of the ideals of ORU. All-round performance is emphasized."

Final nominees were selected by the administration from nominations from Student Senate and Faculty Senate earlier this fall. Less than one percent of all American college students are chosen for the honor.

Hall inducts Oral Roberts

Seven Oklahomans, including President Oral Roberts, were inducted Thursday into the Oklahoma Hall of Fame during banquet ceremonies at Oklahoma City's Shriners Hotel.

Inducted along with Roberts were Dr. Robert Kamms, OSU President; Dr. George S. Benoy, Mills M. Brigg; R. D. Fiddle, Mrs. Henry C. Hitch, and Martha Talches.

A capacity crowd of 1,500 persons attended the banquet. Gov. David Hall presented the Oklahoma Hall of Fame medal and certificate to President Roberts after the reading of his citation.

The banquet and induction ceremonies marked the climax of Student Week, which was the highlight of Oklahoma Heritage Week.

Students receive 'Who's Who' honors

Names of 27 juniors and seniors nominated to be recognized in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges have been approved by the organization's headquarters at Tuscaloosa, Ala., for inclusion in the 1972-73 volume.

Representing the total number of nominees ORU is allowed, all but six nominated were seniors. Nominees include Chris Bunch, Steve Stockley, Gary Crafton, Dave Little, Tom Weaver, Chris Bauer, Rev. Lemons, Linda Salsbury, Pam Campbell, and Bob Isehl.

Also, among those nominated are Don Goff, Blair Caver, Chinty Reinh, Jim Brunnitt, Brant Chaney, Rosemary Bowden, Nancy Albein, Larry Baker, Eldon Lawyer, Roddy Cerullo, and Susan Eckridge.

Set your own pace with liberal arts curriculum

Do you like to work at your own pace? Do you want a well-rounded program in preparation for graduate school? The liberal arts major may be for you.

"The liberal arts major gives the capable student the opportunity to, in effect, do his own thing," said Dr. Hamilton. "Dr. Hamilton is the initial advisor for any student electing the liberal arts major."

Any student interested in the major should complete all general education requirements during his freshman and sophomore years. During the second semester of the sophomore year, the junior and senior program will be developed by the student in conference with an advisor.

The program will include at least two areas of concentration and consist of at least 60 semester hours of course work, 45 of which must be upper-division courses. A senior thesis is required. A GPA of 2.5 is required to develop a program.

The liberal arts major, coupled with the opportunity of credit for courses by examination, affords a student the chance of working at his own pace and in his own area of interest.

Students discuss ‘hoods,’ attitude, committees, omissions

To ‘hood or not to ‘hood

Dear Seniors,

In the past, all ORU graduates have been “hooded” during commencement. This is a practice unique to this institution. Other major institutions of higher learning bestow hoods only upon those graduating with honors. Dr. Irby, president of the TU that we may either continue or terminate this practice.

We, the senior class officers, have decided to request that only those students graduates with honors receive hoods.

As we take our place with the rest of the academic world, let us be willing to be measured by its academic standards.

Our decision is not final. If you think we should change our decision please inform us immediately. We shall willingly reverse our decision should you, in sufficient numbers, communicate your position to us. As your officers,

Sincerely,
your officers

Democrats harassed

Dear Editors,

During the recent national election, we were greatly disappointed in the behavior of our Christian brothers and sisters. Being supporters of the Democratic candidate, Sen. George S. McGovern, we were definately in the minority on the ORU campus.

Feeling that every person has a right to his/her own views, we were shocked by the attacks directed not only at our candidate but also at our personal dignity. However, we are of the opinion that perhaps these persons we speak of didn’t really want what they were doing.

According to the song we sing constantly on this campus, “They Will Know We Are Christians By Our Love,” we want to “guard each man’s dignity and save each man’s pride.” A number of people seemed to be doing just the opposite, whether consciously or unconsciously.

We also realize that a number of people who criticized us weren’t really aware of McGovern’s stand but did go so far as to say he was ‘communist,’ or ‘socialist,’ or the ‘anti-Christ!’ We are trying to understand this ignorance of the issues.

We were deeply hurt that our brothers and sisters lowered their standards to condemn us for our opinions. We were also disappointed that after the election we were teased and taunted to the point of frustration.

We realize it seems that we are poor losers—we don’t want to portray that image at all. We were hurt by everyone’s behavior and we wanted to bring it to their attention because we felt that they may not realize how they behaved.

What is a committee?

Dear Editors,

Will someone please educate me as to the meaning of the word “committee”? Before last Monday (November 6) when I appeared before the Traffic Appeals Committee, “I was under the impression that one person does not constitute this phrase a committee, even if that one person is the Dean of Men. I went to this meeting expecting to have my case, involving an alleged parking violation, objectively reviewed by a committee composed of persons representing various aspects of the university, including students. What I got was one man’s opinion—that of the Dean of Men. When no other person was present and the Dean took it upon himself to judge the appeals singlehandedly, not knowing who the other members were or even attempting to find out who they were. Where were the students who were to have served on the Traffic Appeals Committee? If the Senate itself is at fault for not having appointed these students, then you, Senors, may consider yourselves chid for having failed to represent those of us who requested but did not receive fair traffic ticket appeal reviews. If the students erred by simply not showing up, then I chaste you individually. Or if an administrative office failed to communicate about our request, then I chaste you again.

The Dean’s reason for his refusal was that established procedures must be followed to the letter of the very law. Apparently, ‘Dean’s rigidity is not applied to all procedures concurrently. So it seems a bit ironic to me that a procedure which is designed to provide justice by either correcting a wrong decision or confirming a right one should itself be conducted unfairly and illegally.

Editors’ note: Due to lack of space, Student Senate was unable to make any appointments for this committee until the rest of the Senate consists of two members, Dean Wallace and Carl Reusser.

Arise-its hits again

Dear Editors,

What ever happened to the high standards in accompanying standing ovations? Not a soul is seen over at ORU with out acadamy jingling to its feet, even before the speaker has spoken.

For the benefit of the frosh, and those of you who may have forgotten, ORU WELCOMES a warm round of applause, and occasionally a cheer. As old timers remember, it doesn’t mean a standing ovation.

Please respect that for excellence, I repeat excellence in the work of a performer or words of a speaker.

D. M.

Seafood, carnival
Enjoyment in Panama

by Fossoh Askew

"Panama means more than my land of birth; it is a cheerful little country so small that it fits right into my heart," says Eugenio Raphael, a junior transfer from Panama.

Interlocked by Costa Rica on the west and Colombia on the east, Panama is located about nine degrees above the equator. It is about a 60-minute drive from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean. One can go fishing or surfing in both oceans on the same day.

Panama City, on the Pacific coast, is the capital of this little republic. On the Atlantic side is Colon, the second-largest city.

Raphael says, "Everyone enjoys himself in Panama. One of the great specialities in this country is seafood. You shouldn't forget the superb steaks and pork chips from Panama's own ranch land."

According to Raphael, there are no shopping centers in Panama. Shopping is done up and down the main streets. Places of entertainment include theaters and bowling alleys. One will also find amusement such as tennis, bullfights, folk ballet, and golf. Another special attraction is the annual carnival, which lasts about four days in February.

The Panama Canal, right in the middle of the country, is another special attraction. The canal was built from 1904 to 1914 by the United States and serves as a great international utility for ships of every nation.

Raphael transferred from the Canal Zone College and is majoring in Communications Arts and Biblical Literature. Raphael is proud to have spoken English and Spanish throughout his life. (Continued on page 7)

Student Education Association meets future teachers' needs

by Betty Burke

SEA, the Student Education Association, is a growing organization on campus that is striving for more and more participation and membership. The meetings are definitely student centered.

The purpose of SEA is to familiarize the student with problems and magivagies as well as successes he will face in educational process. One of their goals is to create a sense of responsibility to the student involved in the teaching field. The first objective is, however, to meet the needs not usually met in their course.

The SEA officers include: president Jerry Siv, vice-president Stan West, editor Mike DeAr- rita, secretary Karen Robinson, and treasurer Marty Combs.

Several campus projects are being sponsored by SEA. One is a course taught by Dr. Cheri (Continued on page 4)
Faculty-student 'sound': 'Concerned with the lives of students'

by Renée Colewill

Like the ORU student, they're human. And besides that, they're willing to talk. In fact, it's rumored that the members of the ORU faculty are not devoid of feeling or emotion—but that they are concerned with the lives of their students. "Most of the teachers really care about the students," said sophomore Dave Rambarger. "They understand students as individuals."

"The teachers relate very well to the students in the classroom," commented Bert Voorhees, a New York freshman, and outside the classroom they always seem to be open to the students. Agreeably, our instructors really try. Many students come to college with an attitude of negation concerning face-to-face conversation with their academic instructors. But the teachers are trying to help students overcome this fear.

"It takes a conscious effort on the part of the students to break down the barriers that some students have grown up with during all of their years in school," said Dr. Ringer, an English teacher; "but we do have a common basis in the Lord. I've found that most of my students are very open to me and that generally the relationships between students and faculty are sound and good. Most of the teachers love and enjoy their students, and the students, sensing that, give back to their teachers. I've had students come to my door and tell me that they've been praying for me, or sit by a note under the door telling me I am in their prayers."

Junior Darrell Davis agrees that he has felt that in his teachers. "They are really concerned not only with the academic development of the students, but the spiritual and personal development as well. They give you a warm reception when you come to their offices."

Most teachers extend open-door policy

Not only do the teachers give students a warm reception, but they do it willingly. German teacher Barbara Kittner maintains, "Most teachers are willing to go out of their way for the students. I tell my students to come in and see me anytime they want. I'll talk to them about anything that they feel they need to talk about. Most teachers have this open-door policy. Students don't need to wait until they have an academic problem to come and talk to their teachers."

Mrs. Sterne told, "The teachers are really good, and very helpful. I can talk to them anytime. They are near as normal people and also as professors."

Admittedly, the faculty and students are close and sometimes have an atmosphere at ORU. "There will never be a perfect place," Sociology Instructor Ralph Fagan commented, "but of all the places I've been, this is the best. Here there are many more areas that teachers can relate to their students because ORU is a small college with students and faculty that believe in the Lord. I enjoy working with my students here. I'm close to a college age and I can still remember what it was like."

Transfer students are the most optimistic about the communication between teachers and students at ORU. They have a basis for comparison.

"Our teachers are sensitive and one can really appreciate them," asserted De Lois Sadler, junior. "This school is very demanding on teachers and they're subject to a lot of criticism. A lot is expected from them here at ORU and I think they've done a tremendous job."

Care more than most realize

The teachers care more than some students realize. If they weren't concerned and willing to help and work with the students, they wouldn't be here. The success and happiness of their students is a fulfillment of their careers, work, and lives. Depicted in this letter one student received from his teacher, this is love and concern.

Dear Student:

Thank you for your kind words. To me personally, the greatest aspect of this institution is the fantastic love and spirit of the students. Believe me, the faculty and staff everyone else is very much "administered to" and inspired by your spiritual openness. May this be your best year ever—and it will be.

Sincerely,

Your Teacher.

"They're pretty great kids," Mr. Clemens, a math teacher said. "They have Christ in their lives and it shows."

ORU graduate, Fulbright scholar studies in Poland

Julie Hurburt, a 1971 graduate of ORU, recently visited the campus for a few days and was kept busy relating her experiences at Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Poland.

In the summer of 1970, Ms. Hurburt was a member of the Women’s Action Team and spent 21 days touring in Warsaw, Moscow, Kiev, Leningrad, and London. In the fall of the same year, she applied for a Fulbright grant, never dreaming that a year later she would be in Krakow, Poland. She received word the following year that she had been given a Polish government grant, authorized through the Fulbright Act, and paid for her travel grant. In late October she reached Poland and was together at the university in Krakow.

The first major hurdle in the 11 months she spent there was the language barrier. With only two years of Russian behind her and no knowledge of Polish, Ms. Farburt struggled for about two semesters, learning a lot by osmosis. The second semester she began delving into her classes and was able to become more a part of the university life.

Jagiellonian University was founded in 1570 and offers most psychology, sociology, language, and history courses. Ms. Hurburt lived in a dormitory and attends classes with the Polish students who make up virtually nonexistent none.

How well does she like it there? The 10 months she spent was obviously not enough. It simply barely appetizing for more. Ms. Hurburt returned to Poland for another year of study after being granted permission by the Polish government.

The future? The next stop af- ter returning to the U.S. will be the university degree and eventually teaching Russian. Ms. Hurburt definitely feels she has been a wonderful opportunity for her and wishes that more Americans would take advantage of travel opportunities.

Richard and I are just like everybody else," contends Roberts, who, with her husband, Richard, is a regular performer on the Oral Roberts TV shows. Although a singer, Roberts adjusts easily to the triple role of wife, mother, and career woman.

"Three-fourths of me is wife, mother, and apple pie, cooking and washing floors. The other fourth is prima donna, and I have to exercise that I have to sing because it fulfills part of me." Roberts assumes the full-time job of loving and caring for the children, Christi, 20 months old, and Jali, eight months old, and Rich.

"As long as I can do that and still sing, then I'll do it, but if someday it should reach the point that I can't give the children and Richard the proper love and attention they need, then singing isn't that important to me."

Patti realizes the importance of family life and won't sacrifice her home life for singing. "If a woman chooses marriage and a family, then that is her first duty. I don't feel God called me just to sing, but to be a wife and mother. I'm glad I get to sing—it's in His plan that I do—but I put priority on keeping a stable home and keeping my husband and family."

Priority on stable home

Patti and Richard spend most evenings at home with the children, and Patti is only away from them a few hours, some afternoon (hopefully, when they are napping) if at all. Minutes with the children are golden to her and often she can be seen taking them for walks or playing with them in a child's wagon. "One morning, I sit in this chair, (mimicking to the one in which she was seated) drink my coffee, watch Dinah Shore, and play with the children. I'm still in my gowns but walk up on the floor and giggle and play like a idiot."

Although singing is naturally an important part of the young Robertses' lives, touring engagements do not keep them on the road very often. A recent concert in Minnesota was one of only two road performances last fall schedule, although more are planned for the new year, including a tour of Florida in March. "Since the Lord encompasses all areas of our lives, we feel free to sing any type of music and is d-avoid separate from being Christians, or from our tests." Their programs may range from a medley of "United We Stand, Divided We Fall" and "Lean on Me" to 'The Moment of Truth' to a rock version of "Something Good, Is Going To Happen To You."
The Lord嘈can't miss the spirituality of the concerts. We get down to brass tacks about how we feel about the Lord."

Fun mail times in abundance to Richard and Patti. It may vary from persons requesting pictures, or sick persons asking for prayer, or little children 6 or 7 years old saying: 'I want to be just like you when I grow up.' Patti recalls some of the "Dear Richard" letters that say: "I like the way you sing, Tell your sister I love you, too."

"Sometimes, a few think we are brother and sisters."

Then there are the letters from the students who think they are in love with Richard and want him to fly to their hometown and give them spiritual help. His reply: "My--we Paul and I are praying for you."

Singing is just one of many reasons the vivacious Patti enjoys. Yes, she loves to cook and Richard says she is a good one. "I'm not a gourmet cook because Richard isn't a gourmet either, but I like to cook." She's also an avid reader, and "I usually read the Classics in the morning and the religious books in the evening.

Koleidoscopic interests

Her kaleidoscopic interests overlap into sewing, painting, needle work, interior decoration, and most recently, horseback riding. Her current project is making stuffed animals for her children. She also lends a creative hand to writing. Two books, including an autobiography, are in the planning stages. The other is about children and she may use personal incidents and pictures of her own children. She would also like to start a series of children's books.

Concerning the future, Patti classified it as "very interesting." "We are getting opportunities to sing all sorts of places. There are really no limits on the future—the Lord has given us this far, I envision our singing being fore large audiances and believe people will be moved by it because we have a lot to tell about the Lord and what he has done in our lives."

She and Richard did a "Hee Haw" show to be aired in December. Richard will be appearing with his father on the Dick Clark TV show. Recently completed her first solo album, she has announced she will sign the cover. Early in the year she plans to do a full concert of the album for ORU students. The album is now on sale at the campus bookstore.

Association meets needs

(Continued from page 3) Dawson which is titled "Contemporary Issues in Education." Topics discussed in this course include Child Development and Nutrition, along with other student teaching. Also a seminar which started November 13, is being offered Mondays at 4 in the LRC.

The SEA state convention is being held this year in a hotel in a City. Jerry Six is running for state president of SEA, and Mike DeArnta is running for the position of SEA state editor. SEA members strongly support ORU students at this convention. Not only are our students treated like equals, but our lives as witnesses for Christ will be expressed.

The position of editor was added to the educational board of ORU this year for the purpose of improving the organization of the various activities. SEA is responsible for the annual Student Teacher Banquet and other student teaching activities.

TEC's purpose is to view the inter- and internal aspects of the curriculum of this campus, but SEA is striving to receive state recognition. This is being done by membership drives, and an upgrading of the whole academic program.

SEA supplies liability insurance to its members involved in teachers and student teaching. Any one planning to student teach must become a member of SEA. For further information one may contact Jeanne Biggs of the Education department.

Fuqua, Baker...

Veterans start as guards

by Vickie Morgan

This is the last in a three-part series spotlighting the starters for the 1972-73 basketball season. Featured this week are the guards.

Concerning Fuqua, Coach Jack Sutter states that he is "the old pro" of the team and is "the best that there is." He is smart on the floor and is like in extra coach—he runs everything.

Sutter states that he expects Fuqua to have his best year ever because he has improved his overall game. Many have been critical of Fuqua stating that he is "just a shooter." Sutter believes that these will be proved wrong this season.

"Fuqua is a great competitor. He's an All-American on and off the floor. He's humble to the point that when one talks to him about his ability or skill he changes the subject and talks about the team," states Sutter. "He practices more than anyone else on the team. After practice he'll stay and play one-on-one with somebody.

"The attitude of the team seems really good so far. We've been playing as a lot together and learning to play well with each other. I think every one plays up to his potential we can go to the NCAA."

Considering the pre-season next summer, Sutter believes the only thing that Fuqua can build on is his shooting ability, but states, "I expect him to be picked in the first round."

Larry Baker has two things going for him—he's big and he's got the experience that the Titans needed for the guard position. Make no mistake, Traylor will guard to ward, he has played well this fall and worked hard at becoming a better player.

"We always thought Baker could play guard, probably more Fuzzballers win tourney

The Titan tennis team played in the new indoor court at Crete, Nebraska, last weekend where they participated in an 11-team tournament.

The Titans competed against Kansas University and Doane College and defeated them with a score of 18, 17. K.U.'s score was five while Doane's was four. The northmen won six singles and three doubles matches.

During Thanksgiving vacation the team will participate in the Fort Worth Thanksgiving tournament at Fort Worth, Texas.

Is there a Daniel in the house?

I had a dream Monday night and for days it has been trying to surface to my level of consciousness. I'd give anything to meet a Daniel in 1972. Remember the one in the Old Testament times? A handsome young chap who had "knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom." Kind of a "Mr. O.K."—athletic, on the Dean's List, you know the type. But the best part of this Daniel to me is, he had "understanding in all visions and dreams." Now, that's my kind of man!

Rommate Wiglet says her creative juices start flowing late at night. Her chemical activity begins to bubble after I'm asleep. What do our dreams mean? Can we harness that gray-matter-power in some way?

Amazing! You told Daniel your dream, he told you what it meant. Not only that, here's the message, really lay, King Nebuchadnezzar's memory was a little fuzzy... so Daniel refreshed it by telling the king the dream he couldn't remember.

Just recently I dreamed I walked into a large modern building, made of concrete blocks, no windows. People were sitting at little tables just looking at one another. There was a formal dinner about a woman stood to sing, but was immediately forced to sit down. A man wandered in with a complicated occasion he was working on (the theory of what makes planes fly) but he couldn't quite arrive at the answer. Everything about this place was frustrating.

I woke up shuddering and thought, "Please, don't anybody ever let me go to a place like that! Why, it was like " and you can guess the words that followed.

Even I could understand a dream like that! Without God (no light, no conversation, no singing, no wisdom) it's no picnic.

Yawn. It's pillow time again. Is there a Daniel on the campus?

Where are you Daniel?

Even though the fall season has ended, Coach Myron Peace has big plans for his team this spring. Part of his plans for a successful upcoming season include training from now until January 3. Besides continued practice for the golf game, Coach Peace will be initiating a vigorous weight and aerobics program for his golfers.

Coach Peace feels that the team has a vast amount of potential, and he would like for that potential to be developed and maintained. "I feel sure we can prove something to ourselves first, that we can win the conference and we can beat the top ranking teams in the country." Peace.

The acquisition of Canadian talent has seen a great boost to the team. Besides Dave Berr, ORU's most consistent golfer, Dave Donaldson and Rob Laing, the tournament experienced golfers.

In February the team will compete against some of the top collegiate teams in the nation at the Pan Am tournament to be held at Monterrey, Mexico. They will also compete in other tournaments that are planned for this spring.

The All College Invitational in Oklahoma City November 1-4 was the last tournament of the fall season for the golf team. Eleven teams competed in the 54-hole tournament in which ORU finished with a combined team score of 901. Oklahoma State won with 860, followed by Oklahoma with 872, Arkansas with 874, New Mexico with 876.

Dave Berr tied for fourth place individually with 872 and teammate Harold Fisher finished in the top 15 with 222. Zimmer- man of Oklahoma University won first with 211.

Eleven teams competed in the 54-hole tournament in which ORU finished with a combined team score of 901. Oklahoma State won with 860, followed by Oklahoma with 872, Arkansas with 874, New Mexico with 876.

Dave Berr tied for fourth place individually with 872 and teammate Harold Fisher finished in the top 15 with 222. Zimmerman of Oklahoma University won first with 211.
This past weekend, we saw "A Raisin in the Sun," by Lorraine Hansberry. The performance, I trust, was a memorable experience for the whole campus. The depth of the play was due to its realism, relevancy, and timeliness.

As the rehearsals progressed this fall, we became faced with decisions and some discourage-- ments. The players were feeling up around campus the next day. The cast, crew, and Lewis' few deeply felt that God аннounced "Raisin," the players, and the message of the play the next night.

The drama describes an unguished plight of the black man in our society, the strife of a family, financial corruption in the world, a matrical-three generation family, prejudice, and finally, hope for the future.

The three-act play is built around a $10,000 insurance check sent to Mama Younger, portrayed by Sylvia Jones. Walter, which was my role, wants to invest the check in a liquor store. Mama wants no part in selling liquor. Ruth Younger is strangled by a marriage that is about to fall apart with the complication of another child. Ruth, excellent--ly portrayed by Gayle Green, became exasperated when Mama puts a down payment on a new house, which is an all-white neighborhood.

Edison, unfortunately portrayed by Gayle Bennett, wants to be a doctor and hopes part of the money will be used for her schooling. Asagai, one of her boyfriends, wants her to marry him and practice medicine in his Yoruba village in Nigeria. Africa. George Murchison, another boyfriend, is a rich college student who also wants to marry Beneatha. Eugene Raphael and Tom Parley, respectively, played the two college students. Travis Younger, portrayed by 10-year-old Reggie Fields, gave the play an innocence and a family warmth.

We, the crew, the drama department, Chuck Jones, and the cast would like to thank the students, faculty, staff, and friends for their support, for a play is not a play until it is performed before a receptive audience.

After all is said and done let us not forget universal applications of the play—a man with a dream. Humans have ambitions or seek to find them. In the words of Portia Langston Hughes, from which Ms. Hansberry gets the play's title—"What happens to a dream deferred? Does it dry up like a raisin in the sun? . . . Or does it explode?"

He went to a bilingual high school, where languages of instruction were English and Spanish. He is also planning to take French for his foreign-language requirement at ORU.

This is the first time in his life he's been exposed to this type of weather. "I am trying very hard to adjust myself to it," he said Raphael, with the added comment, "Brrrrr!"

Turkey lovers in luck

by Darin Willey

Turkey means different things to different people. To a bowler, a turkey may mean either a stop on the back or a dirty look, depending on whose team he was on when he made the three strikes in a row which, in bowler's lingo, designates a "turkey." To the world traveler, Turkey may mean a relaxing evening in Ankara, the capital of the Balkan nation. Or to poultry orient-ed intellectuals (bare birds indeed) the very word turkey may stimulate an analysis of "Meleagris gallopavo," i.e., "any of several subspecies of large, wild or domesticated, North American birds with a small, naked head and spreading tail, bred as poultry in many parts of the world."

But disregarding proper nouns and technical connotations, turkey means to most Americans a special time of the year: Thanksgiving. At the very mention of this cultural tradition of giving thanks, visions of drumsticks, mashed potatoes, and pumpkin pie inevitably rise to the surface of the American stream of consciousness. Or would it be more realistically said that nightmares of crowded supermarkets, hot kitchens, and dirty dishes haunt the imaginations of American mothers, or whoever does the cooking nowadays? But folks usually have something to give thanks for on this special day.

Historically, the Thanksgiving holiday has symbolized the deep religious faith of America, specifically that of the founding fathers of our nation, some of whom celebrated Thanksgiving for the first time in 1621. The occasion for giving thanks on that historic date was the "good harvest" of the same year.

As twentieth century ORU Thanksgiving and turkey lovers, Oracle readers may be thankful to know that, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture Statistical Report, Oklahoma and six other states combined have provided one "honest" blessing that is particularly appropriate for the holiday—1,733 (approx.) TURKEYS!
