Wallace recognizes the importance of his new position and is preparing for it.

Ford dubs Wallace Attorney General

President Gerald Ford today appointed Mr. Jack Wallace, former Dean of Students at Oral Roberts University, to the post of U.S. Attorney General. The announcement, issued to newsmen in the Oval Room, followed rumors from high sources that the President was grooming a dark-horse running mate for 1976. When asked if Wallace was to be his running mate for the upcoming Presidential election, Ford replied, "There is a distinct possibility that Jack will be working with me in the future. We've shown great compatibility on the golf course so far. I see no reason why that friendship wouldn't work with the American people."

Wallace was not available for comment at his home in Tulsa, Okla. His wife stated that he was moving his office equipment and papers from his office at the Southern Hills Country Club in preparation for the move to Washington. Mrs. Wallace offered to give this statement on her husband's behalf: "I consider it a privilege, not a right, but a real privilege to serve under such a great man as President Ford. This great land of ours has long been known for its high-caliber leadership, and for the humble attitude of its people. I've always been impressed with Mr. Ford's tasteful manners, hair length, ski-trips, and his all-American clean shaven face. He stands as the epitome of the America I love. Just as I've always told my kids (at the school, that is), 'It's America.'"

Oral Roberts, Wallace's former employer, said in reply to newsmen's queries, "Who?"

The Oracle, ORU's student newspaper, printed a one-page editorial on the subject, which said: "We're sorry to lose a good editor, but we're glad to see him go . . . to Washington, that is."

Saga salaries soar

Saga Food last Friday announced that all student workers would receive raises to bring their pay up to $3 per hour. The announcement was met with some jubilation and tossing of cookies by employees.

Noe Hitman, Saga Manager and Trail Boss, said, "We realize we were taking advantage of these college students—how do they say it, 'ripping them off'—and we decided to give them what they deserved."

Robert Creek, Business Manager at ORU, also announced today that room and board would increase nearly 300 percent next semester. He gave no reasons for the price hike.

Award chokes up Roberts

Delco Shock Absorber Corporation today awarded their "Engineer of the Year" prize to Mr. Will Roberts, executive vice-president for constructions at ORU. According to Violin Silversmith, president of Delco, the award goes to Roberts "because of his innovations in our industry."

This award came to Roberts the week after Midas Muffler honored him for "Significant contributions to the business community."

Roberts is also known around campus as the designer of the Men's Twin Towers parking lot speed bumps.

After first hearing of this latest announcement, Roberts could not comment. He later said he had a lump in his throat.

Martin says 'Date!'

Silly Martin, Director of Student Emotional Activities, announced early this morning that all ORU students will now be required to have weekly dates. "Students just weren't getting into the social aspect of life enough, so we felt that by requiring them to have a date a week, we could better aid their social development," explained Ms. Martin.

How will students be checked? How else but by the ORU tradition of weekly computer cards! Answers to be filled in will be number of times, duration, special creativity and the class of the two persons. "We felt that we should give more points to the guys who had enough courage to go out with older women. A freshman guy who goes out with a senior girl should receive more points than a junior guy who dates a sophomore," Silly says.

But what about those who just plain can't get a date? Silly goes on to say that "we didn't want to have to flunk people out who tried but just couldn't make it happen. So, we've decided to give points for effort. If a guy asks a certain number of girls out, he will at least be given credit for trying. Of course, students must remember to fill out their computer cards!"

What about married students? "Of course, this would not apply to them, as we would definitely discourage messing around on the side, but married couples will get their points by having family outings on the weekend."

In closing, Silly reminds us that "this system is for the students, and they must remember that unless they fill out their dating computer cards, we will have no record of their dates, and this could affect one's dating grade which will be given at the end of the semester."

ORU goes under the dome

by wrong horgan

Yesterday, Vice-President of Trivialities and Wasteful Spending, Will Robertson, announced plans to construct a clear plastic dome which would completely seal off the University from rain, wind, and other known forms of sin.

The dome would be 6 miles long, 5 miles wide, and 3 miles high. It would be equipped with sun lamps in the ceiling and central air conditioning for constant temperature comfort. The stars and constellations will be put in as soon as possible, along with a lifelike moon. The moon will always be full. This could possibly cause problems for the security farce, as it might attract werewolves to the area. However, if this problem can be overcome, there should be beautiful and romantic nights from now on. PDA will be legalized, as students will now be required to take weekly walks and have weekly dates.

The dome itself will be made out of plastic. It is rumored that it is being constructed somewhere in the Arctic and will be flown up by a fleet of 600 helicopters, specially equipped with heavy-duty cranes. It will be lowered into place and will be hermetically sealed.

"Parking will be no problem," states Robertson. "Students will now park either at 81st and Memorial, or 11th and Harvard.

Then they will walk in from there. Some have complained that they don't want to walk the 6 miles to campus, but they're going to have to realize that we just can't think of every minor detail." It has been rumored, though, that the Student Senate is working on the construction of a monorail system, to be completed by 1994, so everything should function well after that.

The Federal Aviation Association had originally filed a complaint, as it felt that the dome would cause a problem for airplanes flying overhead. The complaint was dropped when the Association was promised special use of the dome's new and innovative rooftop airport.

Class to film airy disaster flick; perils of campus life exposed

ORU's film class is making its debut into America's cinema. Beginning April 19, Dr. Steve Ryan's film class will start production of "Gusty Winds." This is a spectacular to be rated among the big movies such as "Earthquake" and "Towering Inferno."

An all-star cast for "Gusty Winds" has already been signed including stars such as Robert Redford, Barbra Streisand, Paul Newman, John Wayne, and Mick McCabe. Making her first appearance on the silver screen will be Pamela Otto.

The movie will be filmed on location at ORU, because where else except in Oklahoma does the wind so literally come sweeping down the plain? The plot will involve the tragic fate of the 2,500 students trapped in their dorm rooms when the gusty winds hit. Imagine the perils of climbing down the golden grills on the high rises in a 90-mph breeze. Or being in the swaying towers as one floor at a time is blown free. The movie shows the desperate attempts of Braxton and Shakarian students to open the windows or doors to escape.

The one place of safety for students is the LRC first-floor maze. As close to 2,000 students crowd into the corridors, Dr. Hartman in the chemistry lab suddenly discovers that his students have finally perfected a deadly gas, smelling like rotten eggs, which is penetrating the building.

Many students are blown away while trying to reach the AC computer cards to plug in their Thursday points for battling winds.

The actual filming will involve the destruction of many buildings. Miniature replicas, including the Prayer Tower, have been obtained from ORU for the production.

Watch for "Gusty Winds" to be an Academy Award nominee in 1976.

Always in a 'punchy' mood, Helen plays for high steaks

Helen Jones, known to most students as "Helen, the Meal Ticket Punch Lady," was arrested yesterday for illegal gambling practices.

Frank Robberson, Chief of Security, explained: "Helen, or whatever her real name is, was head of a big gambling ring, what could turn out to be one of the largest in Oklahoma." It seems Helen was taking bets, slipped to her by students along with their meal tickets.

She also gave advice to student gamblers using a secret code, according to what day and meal she punched.

In a press conference from Tulsa County jail, Helen said, "I was only trying to provide the students with a service. Besides, I never once took a bet from anyone without his tie on. What's the difference between punching meal tickets and taking bets? Either way, I'm helping students gamble."

Goodbye, readers

We're tired of it. People keep saying that the Oracle is a joke. No one trusts us; no one takes us seriously. So this is the last Oracle you'll ever see. We're tired of slaving every week to put out a paper everyone laughs at. But don't blame us. There's nothing wrong with us. The student body is composed of sickies. You are sick, sick, sick. You are out to undermine the University and all the Oracle stands for. You have flooded our office with letters to the editor. You have harassed us for the things we print. And we're tired of it! You won't have the Oracle to kick around anymore. Go somewhere else to get your Ken's Pizza coupons. Let your hamster sleep on regular newsprint. Wrap your fish in The Wall Street Journal. You'll see soon enough how much you miss the Oracle.

Quishuis Who?

Gridley Quishuis is a salesman. He sells tamales and refried beans at the Mabee Center during basketball games and seminars. Today he announced that he was retiring for good, and was the guest of honor at a farewell party given by his associates at Mabee Center. Standing before the crowd of six in his wide-brimmed Mexican sombrero, he tearfully said, "Es-toy tan alegre y humilde." ("I'm so humbled and happy.") Gridley was awarded a silver can opener and three bottles of Myrtle's Mexican Hot Sauce by Robert Creek, business manager at the Mabee Center. Quishuis (pronounced kiss-whiss) was the only Mexican on the Mabee Center refreshments staff.

Alice sees Fantasyland does TU really smash ORU?

Frolicking merrily across the Hare Gardens, earning her 24 aerobics points, Alice suddenly stopped. Straight ahead, a large white rabbit (not an uncommon sight in the appropriately named gardens) was dashing madly o'er the grass. "I'm late, I'm late, for a very important date," he panted worriedly to himself, dropping books as he ran. Being the good person she saw herself as, Alice scurried to retrieve and return them. Following after him, she stumbled and tumbled down a Whole Hole.

Upon regaining consciousness Alice wrung the sweat from her sweats and felt her forehead, which was now the size of a speed bump. The large white rabbit was soothing the wound with the tip of his iodine-coated cottonball tail. "Thank you for returning my HARE/MANities book and sillybus," he said. "Where am I?" Alice uttered. "Why, you're in Signs and Wonders-land. We call it ORU, Oracle Rabbits Underground.

Let me show you around." Alice noticed the pure white covering each rabbit had. Never had she seen so many cute little bunnies or short-hares (and short hairs) with whiskers above their mouths. "Hare we have Sa-ha, ha, ha-ga. It is now in the process of discovering a new way to fix soy-bean carrots. On Sunday nights we hold Vesp-hares. Although ORU does have church-hoppers, we have come to the conclusion that clover will leaf again." "I think your nose is so cute. It's so pink!"

Whole Hares

"Actually, it usually isn't. I've been in my room. Somebody turned off the heat and turned on the air conditioners in 38-degree weather," he replied. "My eyes also are only pink occasionally. Too much study. When teachers say 'Hop to it!' we do it. I guess they're just trying to keep us from being harebrains." Alice was fortunate enough to

LETTERS

To the editor: I would like to emphatically state for the record that I believe that it is patently unfair for certain females on this campus to be allowed out after curfew. The females that I am speaking about are the ORU female toads. Can you give me one good reason why these to-eds should be allowed to roam about the campus at will while the rest of us are shuff up in our dorms? After all, should it not be the duty of every good mother toad to be home with the toadies? Should not the teenage toads have to be in from middle-of-the-week dates by 11 p.m.?

What I propose is that a member of our fine security farce be given the job of going to the Prayer Gardens, standing on top of the Prayer Tower, and announcing, "Now is the time for all good female toads to quit messing around and get home." Of course, he would have the power to give out late minutes. It's time that we have equality. Female toads must be made to conform with the rules, or everyone else will begin to claim that they, too, are an exception to the rule.

Oklahoma City:

The Oklahoma Legislature voted unanimously last week to tax out-of-state college students, in hopes of bolstering Oklahoma's faltering economy. The bill would place a dollar tax on every pound of weight of each student-owned car, payable in full upon date of registration. Most tax figures would go well over $3,000. Those who do not own a car would have to pay a flat rate of $2,500 in taxes.

Attorney General Larry Cherryberry was pleased with the new law and feels it is fair. "I realize that $3,000 is a considerable amount of money, but out-of-state students should help pay for the fine schools we have in this fine state." Cherryberry did say that his office recognizes that a small minority may not be able to pay the tax in full, so it has extended loans to needy students in order to facilitate payment of the tax. "Our office will gladly give loans at 30% interest to those interested. We're actually for the students." Cherryberry has already called in the National Guard to help with the collection of the tax.

Washington:

Congress and President Floored, in efforts to combat the ever-worsening recession, have finally agreed on a new rebate plan. Both Congress and the President have spent long hours in debate in hopes of deciding on a plan that would be fair to all.

The rebate plan would amount to a refund of 8 cents per family of six. However, the Administration pointed out that there would be a 25-cent postage and handling fee, due upon receipt, from the family receiving the refund. Press Secretary Walter Crook said that he feels the American public will be happy to see the check for 8 cents. President Floored also added, "This Administration is dedicated to helping the American people and I'm sure this refund of 8 cents will come in handy to our American housewives who struggle to make ends meet." The bill passed with only one negative vote, that of Rep. Claude Stingy.

Paris:

Henry Kissinger left for Paris today to attempt to reconcile Oklahoma back into the Union. Oklahoma seceded from the Union last week.

The trouble began when Texas refused to stop dumping 1,000 tons of manure onto Oklahoma soil. Oklahoma had taken the case to the Supreme Court, but the high court ruled in favor of Texas. In a lengthy brief handed down by Chief Justice Warren Burglar, the Court stated that the precedent set by "right of eminent domain" was applicable in the case. He also stated that Oklahoma was an excellent site for dumping waste because of its location and general geography.

Kissinger remained mum on the subject of success at the talks. "I think the chances of Oklahoma entering the Union again are really, really good."

Poet's Corner

Some turkey dip and a chicken lip fell on the kitchen floor. Grandma came, grandma slipped we ain't never seen her no more. Well, I picked up that ugly stuff and put it back on the platter, Then Brother John refilled his plate—seems it didn't make no matter. Now, turkey dip and chicken lips have long been fare in our home We stuff 'em in, and wash 'em down, and finish with an ice-cream cone. Visitors and guests and the nation's best—who always seem to know Have said, and repeated, and told —yes, still hold, that dip and lips is gold.

Security puts Hiten in custody

Smoe Hiten vowed that he would "leave the food business forever" during a heated meeting of the Food Committee today. The outburst followed the claim by students that they were served sauteed hockey pucks on the night designated as steak night. Column Steal interjected the statement, "That is incorrect," after Hiten's exclamation. He went on to calmly explain that it was impossible for hockey pucks to have been served that night, as the market for hockey pucks has been bought out by Saga at TU. Dreg Bledso, executive vice-president of Student Menace, asked the council for an objective investigation of the allegations, and moved that Smoe Hiten be held by authorities until the situation was made clear. The move was seconded by Dean Hamilton and thirded by S. M. executive president Randolph Sternum. Hiten was placed in the custody of the ORU Security Department, where he will be forced to run behind the patrol carts until the case is resolved.

Curfew abolished!

Two monumental discoveries were unearthed by the Oracle today. Samantha Straightface, new dean of women, announced today that ORU women will not have curfew next semester. She said, "We trust our girls implicitly. When they come to college, we realize that they are grown women." She said that the Student Affairs staff had been contemplating the decision for about 2 months. In another major development, Earth Science professor Nathan Meleen announced today that hell froze over. He said, "I don't really understand it. We noticed the center of the earth had been cooling for about 2 months. But today it just froze over."

Koodie anti marriage

Mrs. Churl Koodie, speaking at a seminar on Marriage and the Family, told 400 students, "Don't." The speech followed a dinner held at the Mabee Renter today, where Mrs. Koodie's husband, Berry, entertained the group with a medley of 36 songs learned while he was in the Coast Guard station on Buffin Island near Canada. Mr. Koodie remarked, "Oh, she's just mad because I didn't sing her favorite, 'Singin' in the Trees,' during the medley." The couple left the seminar hand in hand, singing.

ORACLE RATING POLL

Please answer the following questions by placing an X in the box beside the answers that best describe your opinions about the Oracle.

The Oracle's presentation of news is:

- unslanted and straightforward
- clear and concise
- excellent
- all of the above

The Oracle should be:

- censored
- shut down
- more biased
- less heretical

If I were editor of the Oracle I would:

- not tell anyone
- realize my backslidden condition
- not accept a scholarship on moral grounds
- quit

The Oracle would be better if:

- junior high kids ran it
- I wrote it
- it were all advertising
- any of the above

When you have completed this survey, please clip it out and stick it in your ear. We're going to run our paper the way we want to.

Captain Ecology defames cause

Captain Ecology has recently been demoted for malpractice. Apparently it was discovered that he had been snatching the excess napkins off of people's trays and throwing them into Fred Creek as an act of vindication.

The Science Department was intrigued by the phenomenal increase of albino water rats in Fred Creek. Through in-depth study, it was found, however, that the albino water rats bore a great resemblance to soggy napkins. The study did not end here.

An aroused Science Department carried on further investigations to find the culprit. Several joggers reported to Security that they had noticed a suspicious looking character madly flinging napkins into Fred Creek, yelling viciously, "Take that, and that, and . . ."

Finally, with the help of the Science Department, Security traced the suspicious character as being Captain Ecology. A horrified Randy Adobe, Saga Foods Manager, questioned Captain Ecology's activities. "Don't you realize you've just drowned three trees?"

Upon being asked why he had chosen this method of protest, Captain Ecology responded, "It was either that or burning the napkins in effigy during Steak Night." Proceeding to leap over a trash can, he added, "But I'm not much of an exhibitionist—I prefer being more discreet."

According to Randy Adobe, the Science Department demanded that Captain Ecology be demoted for defamation of the cause of ecology. Private Ecology is now on "sabbatical." The latest word was that Private Ecology was in the process of capturing several hundred albino water rats in hopes of appeasing the Science Department and regaining his "lost face" with Randy Adobe.

Hexton cancels exam

Dr. Frank Hexton, instigator in the Humanities department, announced today that the Humanities exam scheduled for Friday has been cancelled.

Hexton said the department felt students were so attentive during the lectures that no test was necessary. "All I can hear when I come into the lectures is silence, except for some deep breathing. I suppose that's because they find the lectures so invigorating," said Hexton over the barks of Ralph, his seeing-eye dog.

Agonizing evening on tap

"An evening of Par Avion" will be presented by the ORU Drum and Bugle Corps in Howard Auditorium on April - at 11:30 p.m. Works by the little-known French avant-garde composer to be performed will include "Agony in G," "A Frenchman in Paris, Tx.," and "The Weather Variations."

Tickets will be sold. Proceeds will go to Delta Kappa Sigma in an effort to buy a "practice trailer" to be awarded to the society's outstanding student teacher. Music majors will not be allowed a punch on their recital cards for this concert; however, those attending will be issued one "Get Out of Seminar Free" ticket to be used before the end of the semester.

Storaska attacked

Frederic Storaska, nationally known authority on defense against rape and assaults, today announced that he would skip ORU during his annual tour next year, claiming that ORU women "need no protection whatsoever" against possible attackers. He declined to give reasons for his statement.

News Brief: Frederic Storaska was hospitalized in Newport News, Va., today after he was allegedly attacked by three young women in blue sweat suits. Storaska, who has a first-degree black belt in karate, said, "I knew I should have kept it to myself," but declined to explain his statement.

Moore got ticket, students got SAP

Newly elected President Jim Moore's use of the ticket in the recent Student Association election has been questioned by many voters (and the unsuccessful presidential hopefuls).

Sternsbledsoebailey asked Moore if the ticket of the previous year had influenced his decision to run on the ticket. Moore refused to answer, saying, "What do you understand about politics anyway, whoever you are?"

In confidence Moore told his running mates, Ken Irby and Carol Burton, "I didn't know the password to get in, so I had to get a ticket."

Moore's platform was based on better communication with the administration. He has already issued new tin cans and twine to Jack Wallace and Carl Hamilton.

Past accomplishments include president of the Jack Wallace Fan Club and circulation editor of the fall yearbooks.

Coaches recruit players, expecting many miracles

Well, sports fans, it's recruiting time again, and at ORU coaches of all sports are heatedly involved in their own wheeling and dealing.

Tennis coach Bernis Puke, using his famous picture postcard method, hit the jackpot when he sent one to his colleague in China, who promptly returned a Care package of Mongolian ping-pong stars. The only problem concerns the players' religious preference—they keep converting the tennis balls to Buddhism and shaving off the fuzz.

Meanwhile, on the basketball scene, Coach Whale says, "Things are looking up. The newest recruit is 7-6." the lad, presently visiting ORU, was not available for comment. Apparently, while showering in Shakarian Hall, the shower head goosed him in the ribs, sending him upward. At last word, his head was lodged in the shower stall ceiling and he was receiving the world's cleanest pair of knees.

Coach Whale also reported the return of 6-10 center Mike Mongoloid. Loveable Mike, who has been the mainstay of the Blown Machine for the last 8 years, has decided against graduation in favor of retirement from ORU. Besides returning for basketball, Mike comes back to fulfill his duties with Security. He holds the position of Executive Vice-President in Charge of Lighting the Prayer Tower.

Bill Techeetatruck, president of the Soccer Club, has had favorable results. When asked about his recruiting methods, Bill replied, "We take anyone who's still kicking."

"Uh, I think I took a wrong turn at the Indian Ocean," were the words of Gulliver Fred as he drifted onto the ORU campus yesterday, down the Creek bearing his name. The boat came to a grinding halt on the spillway by the tennis courts. Fred has been awarded an honorary degree by the University and will be employed in the HPE department as instructor for small watercraft next year.

Bill Shellenbarger of the ORU Music Department will play some of his earlier compositions at a faculty recital next week. Shellenbarger is shown here in his junior high school band uniform which, he proudly points out, "still fits perfectly." Along with such original pieces as his arrangement of "Mary had a Little Lamb," Shellenbarger will play more difficult numbers such as the first trumpet parts of classics "Bandology" and "National Emblem."
